New Deal's 'Petty Hitlers' Attacked By Willkie

The Day in Politics

Jersey Invasion

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Newark, N. J., Oct. 7.—Wendell L. Willkie's big mortars strafed Frank Hague all over northern New Jersey today.

Then at Newark Stadium tonight he charged the President is seeking "to perpetuate his power through petty Hitlers."

He called Hague, Mayor Kelly of Chicago and Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, "the pillars of the New Deal democracy."

And he asked: "What claim has the candidate of that party to either liberalism or reform?"

Through quiet and stony-faced Hoboken and Jersey City Willkie's careening caravan proceeded to Journal Square to launch his day-long attack on Democratic "bossism."

Newark Streets Packed

There in the mayor's own citadel he called Hague a "puny Hitler," accused him of crushing civil liberties and of controlling the vote and termed him "the principal promoter of the third term draft."

There followed a 100-mile, 8-hour fleet trip through five other North Jersey communities, with bombs aimed at Hague all along the way. Willkie must cut the Democratic vote in this sector to win. He is sure of South Jersey.

At twilight the weary cavalcade snail-paced it into Newark to find the crowning welcome of the day—packed streets, blaring music and the inevitable confetti and ticker tape. The day's tour through the heart of Hague's bailiwick was without any major booing or missile-throwing incident. But there were hair-breadth traffic escapes as local political luminaries fought at every point to crowd into the speeding parade.

Here before 23,000 screaming partisans at this flood-lighted sta-

13 Billion Spending To Make Deficit Of $5,760,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Treasury expects the current fiscal year to produce a peacetime spending record of $13,000,000,000 and a deficit of about $5,760,000,000.

The anticipated total expenditure would be the second highest in all American history, yielding only to the World War fiscal year 1919 when the outlay reached $18,522,895,000.

The expected deficit would be exceeded only by the figures in the 1918 and 1919 fiscal years.

Newsom May Be Called to Pitch Finale After Reds' Deadlock

Walters Blanks Tigers, 4-0; Derringer Is McKechnie's Choice

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—There will be a tomorrow in this World Series. Bucky Walters has seen to that.

Out on Crosley Field's pitching mound this afternoon, Walters, the infield flop who turned pitcher, stood like a bulwark between Cincinnati's Reds and extinction in this World Series. The roars of 30,481 Cincinnati fans for Walters were couched in a frenzied appeal that he keep the Reds in the series.

He did. He choked off the batting power of the Detroit Tigers with a five-hit performance. He shut the Tigers out. He tied the series at three games each and assured baseball's first seven-game series since 1934. He won his second series start, 4 to 0.

Walters did more than that. He arranged the trappings for high drama in this series. Because on tomorrow's seventh game will hinge the identity of the new world champions, and tomorrow's game will find Managers Bill McKechnie and Del Baker shooting the works in an all-out bid to win the series.

Back to the pitching mound for the Tigers may go big Buck Newsom, despite only one day of rest. Manager Baker has resolved that this is no time to quibble. In the lap of the Tigers' best pitcher he has deposited Detroit's hopes. Newsom, twice winner over the Reds, a three-hit shutout author in his fifth-game start, has volunteered for the job. Baker has indicated that he will send the big fellow out there.

BUCKY WALTERS

Thus it will probably be Newsom vs. Paul Derringer. McKechnie's choice of Derringer is as natural as his next breath. He doesn't have another pitcher who has beaten the

Scalise Given 10-to-20-Year Prison Term

2d Offender Charge, Which Would Have Doubled Penalty, Fails

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 7.—George Scalise, former president of the Building Service Employes International Union (A. F. L.), convicted September 14 of forgery and grand larceny in the theft of funds from his own union, was sentenced today to from 10 to 20 years in State prison.

Sentencing followed dismissal of an information charging Scalise with being a second offender as a result of a conviction in 1913 on a Mann Act charge. Scalise showed obvious relief at this ruling—for as a second offender his sentence automatically would have been doubled.

Then General Sessions Judge Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., announced that the sentences on five separate counts—ranging from one to two and five years—were to run consecutively.

As the import of the word "consecutively" dawned upon him, Scalise swayed and gripped a handrail before the bench. He turned questioningly to his attorney, Martin W. Littleton, who merely shook his head. Then he left the courtroom, supported by two bailiffs, to return to the Tombs.

At the request of Littleton, a stay of execution of sentence until Friday was granted, indicating Scalise's attorney may seek a certificate of reasonable doubt—first step in an appeal action.

Roosevelt Hailed

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt left Albany tonight for Washington after a 75-mile tour of up-State New York.

During the day he saw steel being processed into mammoth guns and looked over the rolling hills where an American Army defeated the British exactly 163 years ago in the decisive battle of Saratoga.

And, whether he wanted it or not, the trip took on some of the aspects of campaign swings of the past, with huge crowds turning out to cheer him on his way, and a car and bus smothered with Democratic campaign banners crowding into his motorcade at Troy.

Democrats were holding a political rally here tonight and agreed to call it off in time to stage a demonstration at Union Station before the President departed for Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt rode through thousands of people jammed up against the street car tracks near the station, and from them got a thunder-

They are Robert R. Ransome, 91, of Stamford, Tex.; Gen. John M. Claypool, 95, of St. Louis; Gen. J. R. Sadler, 97, of Nashville, Tenn., and Burrel Nash, 101, of Sulphur, Okla. The reunion headquarters is at the Willard Hotel.

They talked yesterday, and they didn't like Hitler or the way he is fighting a war.

There probably will be more talk today, when more of them have arrived.

Ransome, who enlisted in the Sixth Georgia Regiment when he was 15, is convinced England will win, and says that if he were a young man he would go and fight Hitler now. "I'll fight anyway if he comes over here," said Ransome, one of the first veteran arrivals here.

Gen. Claypool, wounded at Murphreesboro, Chickamauga and Franklin, scornful of modern fighting, "this brutality and killing of innocent people.

"They never let us take a fence rail," he said. "I remember mighty well one time when a soldier stole a hog. They made him cut it up and carry it four days on a march for punishment."

ADJUSTMENT of relations between Japan and the United States in the present critical state of affairs is impossible, says spokesman for Tokyo foreign office. Page 2.

Far East in Forefront

A State Department conference with the Ambassador of Russia last night climaxed a day of important Capital discussions of vital questions relating to the Nation's defense in both oceans.

Constantine Oumansky, the Ambassador, called on Undersecretary of State Welles in what was called a resumption of talks engaged in last summer and looking toward betterment of American-Soviet relations. No information was forthcoming on the trend of the discussion but it was generally conceded that one likely topic was Moscow's reaction to Japan's new formal alliance with Germany and Italy.

Earlier, Admiral J. O. Richardson, commander of the fleet, arrived from the West Coast and discussed with Secretary of the Navy Knox the new situation in the Pacific in view of the three-power hookup. Present at the conference, also, were Undersecretary James Forrestal, Assistant Secretary Lewis Compton and Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

Hull and Lord Lothian Confer

Secretary of State Hull and Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, also conferred on the Far East situation amid speculation in other circles on whether Japan may be planning some striking step in her drive to dominate east Asia. Secretary Hull later talked also with Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister.

And Admiral William D. Leahy, Governor of Puerto Rico, said here that Puerto Rico will be headquarters for the new bases to be set up on Caribbean sites obtained from the British. He added that when the bases are completed "the whole Caribbean area, including the Pa-

American Envoy Believed Asking Molotoff to Send China More Arms

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 7.—Great Britain, it was learned tonight, has offered to increase its trade with Russia in the hope of enlisting Josef Stalin's support in her new campaign to increase the flow of arms to China.

Eager to keep Japan entangled in the Far East by supplying more war apparatus to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, but unwilling to release supplies needed for the war in the West, Britain has offered to reopen the Anglo-Russian trade talks and apparently has in mind a deal by which Russia would get the rubber, machinery and machine tools she needs, provided she paid for them in war material which would be passed on to China.

This apparently is the broad idea behind the talks the British Ambassador, Sir Stafford Cripps, and Laurence A. Steinhardt, the United States Ambassador, had with Premier Vyecheslaff Molotoff in Moscow. Just what part the United States is prepared to play in such a deal is not known but there is an indication that Steinhardt also is concentrating on getting the Russians to agree to a considerable increase in the supply of arms for China.

Soviet Envoy Cool

The Russians evidently are ready to deal with the United States but they are still not anxious to enter into any far-reaching bargain with Britain.

When Richard A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, suggested to Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, that in view of Japan's cooperation with the Axis, Britain and Russia might reach an agreement about helping China. Maisky is reported to have been cool and noncommittal. He referred Butler to Moscow and the idea got no better reception there.

U. S. Power May Swing It

This does not mean that a deal will not be reached eventually. Britain will open the Burma road, probably on October 18, and eventually some kind of trade agreement may be reached, but it is more than likely that when and if it is, it will have to be arranged by the United

Rome, Oct. 7.—An expulsion order was issued against this correspondent today by the Italian government. The announcement was made in the official communique and was also issued over the Italian radio, which had never been done before in such cases. The decision is understood to have been taken as a measure of foreign policy in view of the fact that President Roosevelt cited a passage from this correspondent's dispatch of October 3 which was interpreted here as an electoral maneuver on the President's part.

The order reads as follows:

"The American journalist, Herbert Matthews, has been asked to leave Italy because of his dispatch to the New York Times in which it was falsely affirmed that Italy and the Axis were interfering in some way in the United States Presidential election and therefore meant to disturb relations between the two countries."

Record Raid Rocks Berlin, Starts Fires

Alarm Lasts 4 Hours And 42 Minutes; One Plane Felled

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), Oct. 8.—British warplanes in a raid of record-setting violence on the German Capital killed and wounded several Berliners last night and early today and struck storehouses, rail lines, various apartments and two hospitals with explosive and fire bombs.

One British plane was shot down by the terrific concentration of anti-aircraft fire.

A German communique issued shortly after the raid gave a terse outline of what happened in the four hours and 42 minutes of bombing and artillery fire which topped all previous raids on the German capital.

The communique said:

"British planes attacked the Reich capital last night. At various points explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. Among other things, two hospitals and various private houses, as well as warehouses and railroads, were hit, resulting in fires which were quickly extinguished.

Companion Escapes

"Several dead and wounded must be lamented.

This spectacular destruction of a British bomber came fairly early in the raid when the plane was at a height semiofficially estimated at 9,000 to 12,000 feet.

Caught in the converging cone of at least 16 searchlights, the plane was held relentlessly in a quarter-mile patch of light into which the guns from the ground poured volley after volley of the heaviest caliber explosive shells

Intense Assaults Follow Day of Duels 6 Miles Over Capital

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Oct. 8.—Adolf Hitler's nightriders attempted to make up for lost time last night and early today by striking hard at a number of London districts following a day of fierce "substratosphere" dog fights above the capital.

Deprived of their timetable assaults night before last by storm-swept skies for the first time in 30 days, the raiders swept back with the stars to lunge repeatedly at the metropolis. In all, 10 London districts and a number of provincial areas were sprayed with high explosive and incendiary bombs.

The night attacks were a continuation of mass daylight forays in which the Royal Air Force broke up formation after formation of German planes 4 to 6 miles above the city. The number of raiders

Dover, England (Tuesday), Oct. 8 (AP).—A German plane laid down a mysterious white smoke screen along the French coast across from Dover early today, and a bustle of activity was reported shortly afterward among small boats off the continental coast.

The English Channel was glassy smooth. Shore watchers agreed the smoke screen was intended to hide some major shore activity in the Boulogne vicinity.

Drive to the East

By the Associated Press

Germany's historic dream—the march to the east—touched the threshhold of reality last night.

The armies of Adolf Hitler strode into Rumania to build powerful bases on the Black Sea and the Danube, to link them with the Reich by a great paved road, and to enforce on all comers the "verboten" sign already posted over that troubled puppet kingdom.

[Italian sources circulated reports that Fascist detachments will enter Rumania with the Germans and that some units have already begun to cross Yugoslavia, a New York Times dispatch from Belgrade said. This is officially denied and cannot be confirmed by eyewitnesses in Susak, Ljubljana or Zagreb, where such movement would be likely to be spotted.]

All the Balkans tingled with the sensational news, which military observers were quick to cite as foreshadowing possible Rumanian-Bulgarian-Hungarian entry into the German-Italian Axis for a Near East campaign, or a likely military-backed diplomatic offensive against Turkey.

In any event, the status of shrunken Rumania as a sort of colony of Germany seemed all the more certain.

[Diplomatic quarters in Sofia declared that Bulgaria is about to join the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance,

Grace Will Confer Or Get No Steel, Union Head Says

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 8 (AP).—Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem Steel Corporation president, "is either going to sit down at a conference table with us or he will get no steel," Smile Chatak, steel workers organizing committee representative, told a mass meeting of some 500 employes of the company's Lackawanna plant today.

Chatak, warning that a general strike may be called next Sunday, unless the company, meanwhile, makes a satisfactory adjustment of the C. I. O.-affiliated union's grievances, told the workers "when we get through with Grace, he will be a . . . good American citizen."

Chatak said a strike would affect approximately 70,000 Bethlehem workers and tie up production in the company's 12 plants, reportedly at work on more than $1,000,000,000 in defense orders.

Pogroms and Bombings Also Proved Pretty D. C. Visitor's Mettle

Troubles come in threes to Helena Schombach, 24, German refugee. She'z come smiling through a pogrom in Cologne, Germany; bombing in London, and torpedoing on the high seas.

Miss Schombach had to leave England twice to get to the United States, she said here yesterday at the Dodge Hotel. Her first trip westward terminated when the City of Benares sank, victim of a German torpedo, 700 miles out in the Atlantic on September 16.

Her 20 hours in a lifeboat on the storm-tossed North Atlantic were the coldest, wettest and loneliest she ever spent in her life, Miss Schombach said.

"The British crew of the destroyer which rescued us were absolutely marvelous," she said.

"They knew I was German, but it just didn't make any difference, especially after I told them my brother was serving in the British army."

After her rescue, Miss Schombach was taken to "a northern Scottish port." Then she sailed for the United States on the Samaria. She had just reached this country after a three-week trip.

A blonde, merry-eyed lass, she came here with a friend, Dorothea L. F. Sallinger, to confer with attorneys seeking permission for her three uncles, William Edward and Jakob Pohoryles, to enter the United States. Known as the "caviar

Western High Graduate Dies In Crash of Army Plane

Two Army fliers, one believed to be a Washingtonian and former West Point football star, died late yesterday when their two-seater attack ship crashed against the side of a mountain and exploded 30 miles outside Salt Lake City, the Associated Press reported.

Lieut. Mather

The dead aviators are tentatively identified as Lieut. James E. Mather, 24, who formerly lived at 5312 Reno road northwest, and Pvt. Homer C. Lloyd, of Rosebud, Mont. A watch bearing Mather's name was taken from one of the bodies, both of which were badly burned.

A eyewitness said the crackup occurred shortly after the single-motored plane had glided low over his cabin.

"It soared about 1,0[illegible] feet farther east," said the witness, [illegible]orge Watson, "and then cr[illegible] head-on against the base [illegible]y Marley Mountain."

First to reach the scene was W. S. Olsen, Forest Service foreman. He found the ship on its back. One of the fliers, in the rear cockpit, was alive, he said.

"For God's sake, hurry up and get me out of here," cried the living aviator, according to Olsen.

Olsen said he smashed the glass to

Rumania Becomes Virtual Colony As Nazis March In

International News Service reported.

[Such a move, coming immediately after announcement that German troops are being sent into Rumania, points to early partition of Greece, and possibly some territorial loss to Yugoslavia.

[Representatives of the Greek, Bulgarian and Yugoslavian governments are expected to be invited to Rome shortly for a peaceful settlement of Bulgaria's and Albania's territorial claims.

[Bulgaria seeks an outlet through Thrace, in northeastern Greece, to the Aegean Sea; Albania, under Italian domination, seeks northwestern Greece; and Macedonians are crying for independence or union of the Macedonian peoples with Bulgaria—a link which would take part of Yugoslavia.

[Greece was represented as still opposed to any territorial concessions, and has 150,000 troops on the Albanian frontier. Nevertheless, with the Axis and Bulgaria bearing down, Greece was expected to yield.

Boris Set on Joining Axis

[Public opinion in Bulgaria, it was reported, is by no means unanimously in favor of union with the tripartite Axis alliance. Nevertheless, King Boris was represented as firmly determined to join the group.

[Minister of Agriculture Labrianoff, close personal friend of Boris, is now in Berlin, where he is understood to be preparing an announcement of Bulgarian adherence to the pact. On his return to Sofia, Labrianoff is expected to become leader of the government in place of Premier Filoff.]

The German army entry and its program gained confirmation half in Berlin and half in Bucharest while each capital cast some bit of doubt on the portion reported in the other.

Authorized German sources said the army had entered Rumania to prevent British sabotage of the vital oil fields and to make good the Nazi guarantee of Rumanian frontiers now that Hungary, Bulgaria and Russia all have had slices of the Rumanian territorial pie.

"We don't do these things for fun," said the Germans. "We mean business."

Cagily, they scoffed at Rumanian reports that they would build a big trans-Rumanian road, would erect a naval and air base on the Black Sea south of Constanta, and vastly expand a submarine base opposite Galati on the Danube—facing Russian-held Bessarabia.

Several Divisions

Rumania officially called the reported entry of German troops "premature," but mentioned the existing close relations with the Reich, while military circles said billets already have been prepared for several divisions of German troops.

Indications of the Germans' arrival were seen in the leasing of entire hotels and the reservation of dozens of the best rooms in others for German officers.

Ten suites were reserved in the Bucharest hotel across the street from the royal palace where young King Mihai reigns while Premier Ion Antonescue rules as dictator on the Iron Guardist pro-Nazi pattern.

[A United Press dispatch from Bucharest said the number of German troops arriving in Rumania may reach 50,000. Some are arriving aboard big transport planes, others are bringing in motorized equipment, the dispatch said.

[Best available information was that about 15,000 German troops were expected to be in Rumania by today and it was said that two more divisions, or 30,000 men, might follow.

Official circles in Yugoslavia said 3,000 German military police already were in the Rumanian oil fields and that large number of German officers had been assigned to reorganize the Rumanian army on Nazi lines.

The Germans lent strong color to the speculations on Turkey's danger when they said it could be assumed that one subject of last week's conference between Fuehrer Hitler and Italy's Premier Mussolini was the matter of putting pressure on the guardian of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus.

Turkey is a non-belligerent ally of Britain, and the two only yesterday were reported completing a new broad trade accord providing for British storehouses in Istanbul and British warships to convoy merchantmen.

John J. Dugan, Retired Chief Petty Officer, Dies at 78

Chief Petty Officer John J. Dugan, U. S. Navy, retired, died at the age of 78 yesterday at his home, 5621 North Capitol street, after a week's illness.

A native of Ireland, he came to this country as a boy and lived and worked in upstate New York before enlisting in the Navy. Since his retirement about ten years ago he has lived in Washington, where he was a member of the Nativity Catholic Church, an Eagle, and a Hibernian.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Mary Dugan; a daughter, Mrs. Stephen V. Collins, of Corning, N. Y., and two sons, John J. Dugan, jr., and T. Charles Dugan, of Washington.

was declared authoritatively to have numbered nearly 500.

A "Molotoff breadbasket" was dropped during the night near a large West End store adjoining others wrecked by heavy caliber bombs a fortnight ago. A high explosive bomb also damaged a large and famous West End structure now used as an office building and an incendiary fell near a bank in that vicinity but was extinguished.

Other Nazi formations dropped bombs in a thickly populated area of a southeast Scottish coast town during the night, Exchange Telegraph reported. One explosive struck near a tenement and a number of people were cut by flying glass. The ceilings of nearby buildings collapsed from the impact.

From before dawn until after dusk last night London had experienced six air raid alarms.

Come Every Ten Minutes

Despite the fairly widespread damage inflicted in the night assault there were no reports immediately of casualities.

The Nazi bombers, coming in very fast, frequently changed their direction in an effort to escape the sweeping searchlights and inferno of shell bursts sent up by ground batteries in full-throated unison. But they kept coming at 10-minute intervals.

British warplanes were on patrol in the darkness outside the great ring of lights.

As the night wore on, additional reports came in of raiders over northwest England, the highly industrialized Midlands, the northeast and west coasts.

Some German craft hovered over a northeast coastal area two hours. Dropping flares and braving intense antiaircraft fire, they dropped bombs some distance inland.

Around midnight there was a lull, lasting some time.

Bursting shells and flaming onions flecked the night sky and rooftop observers repeatedly had to duck for shelter as chunks of jagged metal clanked to earth.

Apartment Block Fired

A series of heavy detonations sounded in the central area, and many incendiaries rained down, hitting one bus, starting fires in a big block of apartments and causing the sky to flame red briefly.

Coming in a steady stream, the Germans filtered across the London sky attempting to evade the creeping barrage.

The air ministry, describing the day's actions, in which 28 German bombers and fighters were said to have been sent crashing, said one invisible battle was fought between Hurricanes and more than 50 Messerschmitts zigzagging nearly 6 miles above London.

Fourteen British craft were reported missing.

450 Planes Attack

The British airmen speared into big formations totaling perhaps 450 planes which five times attempted to reach London during the day, and then tackled another mass of raiders which crossed the Dorset coast near the big naval base of Weymouth.

The German squadrons were said by the air ministry to have been forced upward by clear weather and to have "concentrated on height and speed." Many of them were fighter planes loaded with bombs.

Messerschmitt fighter protected Messerschmitt fighter, instead of the usual order of Messerschmitt protecting bomber, and the air ministry said the R. A. F. kept them at 20,000, 25,000 and 30,000 feet.

One Hurricane squadron met 15 of them carrying bombs, the Air Ministry said, with 40 or 50 more above and behind, and destroyed seven of them.

Three times day raiders were turned aside, but in other attempts the Germans penetrated the central district, dropped bombs in the southeastern outskirts, causing death, injury and destruction for a few of London's millions in two boroughs.

A companion plane, apparently seeking to divert some of the lights and the gunfire, sped into the glare, but to no avail, and ducked out into the darkness again.

During the entire alarm there was scarcely a quiet moment as the bombers droned back and forth across the city, evidently trying to make up for the past three calm nights, while the cannonading from the ground maintained a hot pace.

Fires Started

[A number of fires were started, the United Press reported. A bright red glow followed by billows of black smoke was visible on the northern horizon. Two of the fires burned for more than two hours and at one time more than five separate blazes were counted. Fire engines dashed through the streets at intervals all during the long raid.

[The raiders dropped dozens of parachute flares to guide their bombs and at times Unter den Linden was as bright as day. The raiders apparently came over in seven waves.]

The intensity of the artillery fire was such that the whole horizon of the city was a constant succession of cone-shaped flashes, as light, medium and possibly heavy guns in the interior of the city chorused in such volume that windows of buildings rattled.

The roofs rattled with falling shell fragments.

It was difficult to determine whether the rocking explosions were bombs or merely crashing volleys from whole batteries of antiaircraft guns.

Portal in Charge

[International News Service attributed the size of the raid to the fact that Sir Charles Portal, former head of the Royal Air Force bomber command, has just taken over command of the entire R. A. F.

[This was the first opportunity Portal has had to direct a major attack on Germany, since weather previously prevented any mass flights into the Reich.

Invasion Bases Blasted

London, Oct. 7.—British bombers, in a camaign to blast and cripple the Nazi war machine, pushed home daring daylight attacks on German objectives on the "invasion coast" yesterday despite consistently bad weather, the air ministry announced today.

The raids began at dawn and when they were over, the ministry said, hits had been scored on the Germans at Ostend, Belgium; Calais, and Boulogne, France, and in the Dutch harbors of Harlingen, Stavoren, Enkhuisen, Dordrecht, and Den Helder.

Nazi Airdrome Bombed

Other British bombers went on over Holland into Western Germany and bombed the airdrome at Diepholz, 30 miles southwest of Bremen.

Diepholz already has felt the jar of British bombs in six previous attacks, according to a list of more than 200 "military targets" raided by the Royal Air forces up to September 30 in Germany and German-occupied territory.

The list was published by the ministry of information, amplifying the announcement of the British "master plan" aimed at "weak spots" in the German war effort.

Berlin Raided 15 Times

Berlin—the Reich's heart—has been raided 15 times. The list revealed that the British struck there at gasoline installations, utilities, railways, aircromes and gun positions.

The ports of amburg, raided 36 times; Hamm mes, and Bremen, 31, were es targets of the Royal Air Fo

In yesterd ting, the air ministry info service said, one British raider flew two heavy bombs in the midst of a group of 50 barges at Calais.

Just as his mission was completed, the raider was attacked by 12 Messerschmitt fighters. In a quick running fight, the British bomber crew shot down one German plane in flames, the service said, and held off the others until their craft reached the haven of a cloud.

Japan Regards Agreement With U. S. Impossible Now

By International News Service.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Oct. 8.—Adjustment of relations between Japan and the United States in the present critical state of affairs is impossible, a foreign office spokesman said today.

At the same time Foreign Minister Matsuoka expressed regrets that "western powers are thwarting Japan's peaceful efforts to feed her population and increase the wealth of the land," and Prime Minister Prince Konoye called the American embargo on scrap iron shipments a "hostile act."

Japan's attitude was summarized by Matsuturo Shoriki, publisher of the powerful newspaper Yomiuri, who said:

"America has misjudged Japanese strength and purpose."

"Should America aggravate Japanese feelings any further by naval demonstrations or encouragement of alleged British-Australian embargoes on oil, etc., the Japanese people cannot help but regard these acts as tantamount to a declaration of war."

Apparently, Japan expects the first move for improvement in relations to come from Washington. The foreign office spokesman said:

"There is no room for a basic readjustment of relations between Japan and the United States in the current situation, especially since the United States insists on a solution of all pending questions first.

"The United States has not made any concrete proposals or suggestions to Japan."

Japanese authorities minimized the prospects of Occidental aid to China, and said anticipated reopening of the famous Burma Road by Britain would have little effect.

Arrival of Japanese airmen in Indo-China, according to the newspaper Asahi's Hanoi correspondent, means that the Chinese provinces of Yunnan and Kweitchau, thwart the Burma Road, now are controlled by Nipponese fliers.

"Chiang Kai-shek (the Chinese generalissimo) thus is vitally menaced," Ashi said. "Even if the English open the Burma Road, it would cause no uneasiness in Japan. Now it is easy to bomb the Burma Road by attacks from Hanoi, and it is necessary only to destroy some important bridges in order to paralyze traffic on this road for a long time."

Canadian Troops Sent to Pacific

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, Oct. 7.—When Japan joined the Axis, Canada moved more troops to the Pacific Coast, Defense Minister J. L. Ralston revealed today. Intensive study is now being given, he said, to establishing a Pacific command coordinating all defense units in the same way that an Atlantic command was set up in Canada some months ago.

"The expulsion of the American journalist which has been ordered by the Italian government is an act of pure clarification of Italian policy in its relations with the United States," Gayda wrote. "The zealous American writer, in the service of American electoral interests, tried to create a new intrigue by speaking without being able to give the slightest proof in the way of facts of a plan of Italian policy directed at bringing about Roosevelt's defeat in the Presidential election. A plan does not and cannot exist.

"It has already been said it does not matter to Italy whether Roosevelt is reelected or not or whether he proves a man of peace or war. Italy, like Germany, knows she will win the war against Britain under any conditions. She has no reason to be worried at the attitude of other countries and the eventuality of a new alliance which Britain might snag and which would merely turn out as preceding ones did, in tragic self-destruction.

"However, Italy does not permit that her clear policy should be turned, even for the benefit of an electoral campaign, into confusion and into attempts at dark maneuvers. Therefore she is making a clear slate of paid gossipers and intriguers. Italy is not mixing in the internal politics of the United States. She demands that American citizens do not mix in her affairs and do not attribute to her with deliberate falsehood plans which are not hers.

"Those American citizens who still desire truth and honesty in their international relations will thank Italy for this act of clarification, which can only permit a more correct orientation of their problems and their international position."

The last American newspaperman to be expelled from Italy was H. R. Ekins, of the United Press, in August, 1939, but three Life Magazine photographers were expelled in June, 1940, and in between, some French newspapermen. It is estimated that nearly 30 journalists have been put out of Italy since January, 1936.

The New York Times case most resembles that of three Swiss journalists who were asked to leave in February, 1939, because of the international quarrel between Italy and Switzerland. President Roosevelt made the New York Times dispatch into an issue between himself and the Axis—or, at least, it was so interpreted—and this is the Axis' answer.

[United State Charge d'Affaires Edward Reed took up the Matthews' expulsion order with the Italian foreign office in an effort to have it rescinded, the United Press said.]

Roosevelt Sorry

Watervliet, N. Y., Oct. 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today it was just too bad that Herbert Matthews, New York Times correspondent, had been expelled from Rome.

Duce Reviews Troops

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 7.—Fascist legions, prepared for war, displayed their prowess before Premier Mussolini today in northeastern Italy while Rome diplomatic quarters speculated on a variety of events, among them the possibility that Il Duce might be about to make a speech on the Axis' next move.

Mussolini was in the Verona area continuing his troop inspections along the Po. On Thursday he will review more units at Padua, in the same area, and informed circles expressed belief he might say something then about his Brenner Pass consultation.

Survivor Tells Of Ship Sinking

Miss Schombach explained the torpedo struck without warning, killing many children in their beds.

"It was a terrific, dull roar, like a grea noise confined in a small space," she related.

Beyond Frightening

"Then we went calmly to the boats," she continued. "I was so grateful that I had not brought my parents or my nephew that I was unable to be frightened."

With unassumed calmness, she remarked she "slid down a rope into the lifeboat where the Lascar stewards and crewmen were screaming to Allah and saying their prayers."

They spotted the rescuing destroyer in the early afternoon on the day following the ship's sinking. They were in the last boat reached by the destroyer, "because so many other people were floating on the pounding seas on wreckage and rafts," she said.

Of the 421 passengers on the City of Benares, 274 never reached shore. "This was not my first experience with horror and frightfulness," Miss Schombach said softly, "I remember also a pogrom in Cologne and bombing in London."

Westinghouse to Buy Air Filter Company

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 8 (AP).—Negotiations for sale of the American Air Filter Co. to Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. for approximately $4,500,000 have been completed, William M. Reed, president and founder of the Air Filter Co., revealed today.

Westinghouse directors have approved the transaction, Reed said, and it soon will be submitted to American Air Filter Co. stockholders.

Westinghouse is expected, Reed added, to take possession on or before November 15 and immediately move manufacturing activities of the Westeinghouse electric filter division in Cleveland to Louisville.

Jackson to Testify On Labor Ruling

Hillman and Knox Asked to Appear Before Smith Group

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Jackson and at least two other high officials will appear today at a Smith committee hearing on the question of withholding defense contracts from firms found guilty by the Labor Board of violating the Wagner Act.

The inquiry was decided on yesterday by the Smith committee as the direct result of the Attorney General's informal opinion last week that the findings of the Labor Board are binding on other Federal agencies until reversed by the courts.

This opinion has been interpreted in some Congressional quarters as meaning that the Defense Commission will not sanction contracts with companies which the Labor Board has ruled against—even though the matter may be pending in court.

Patterson to Testify

In addition to Jackson, both Assistant Secretary of War Patterson and Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Navy Bureau of Engineering, have acepted the Smith Committee's request to testify at 10:30 today.

Secretary of the Navy Knox and Sidney Hillman, labor member of the Defense Commission, will also be asked to appear. It was a request from Hilllman, who was out of town yesterday, that prompted the Attorney General's ruling.

[The Defense Commission, on August 31, laid down the general policy that "all work carried on as part of the defense program should comply with Federal statutory provisions affecting labor," such as the Wagner, Walsh-Healy and Wage-Hour Acts.]

The Smith Committee yesterday prepared subpenas for Jackson, Patterson, Hillman and Knox. But the subpenas were not employed.

Hopes to Find Reason

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Smith Committee, declared yesterday that he hoped to find out from Jackson and Hillman "what prompted Mr. Hillman to ask the Attorney General for the ruling." The War and Navy Department representatives, he said, would be asked about the effect of the suggested policy on the national defense program.

Representative Smith said that he understood that over 140 companies have been found guilty of Wagner Act violation by the Labor Board but, because of court appeals, have not yet complied with board orders.

Meanwhile, Representative Smith introduced in the House a bill stating:

"Notwithstanding any other provisions of law or any opinion of the Attorney General, no ruling or decision of any department, bureau or agency of the United States Government shall be final or binding on any person or any other agency of the Government while an appeal from such decision is pending in the courts, unless and until such appeal has been finally terminated by affirming such decision."

The proposal was referred to the Judiciary Committee, whose chairman, Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, said last night he had not seen the bill and had no plans to act upon it.

Two-Party, Two-Ocean Discussion

NAVY CHIEFS ALONGSIDE—Arriving in Washington yesterday from the West Coast, Admiral J. O. Richardson (right), fleet commander, went into immediate conference with Secretary of Navy Frank Knox. They discussed the "situation in the Pacific" and the naval expansion program

nama Canal will be secure from overseas attack."

Of Knox's parley with Admiral Richardson, an announcement by the Office of Naval Intelligence quoted the Secretary as saying only this:

"Routine reports of the fleet were received, the situation in the Pacific was discussed, and matters pertaining to the expansion of the Naval establishment to date were discussed."

While it was considered likely that Secretary Hull and Lord Lothian discussed British reopening of the Burma Road, important lane for military supplies to Japanese-invaded China, the Ambassador would not comment. He told newsmen that he could say nothing until an announcement had been made in the House of Commons.

London dispatches indicated this announcement was expected soon, possibly today, and that the road would be opened on October 17, the expiration date of an Anglo-Japanese agreement under which it was closed for three months.

In addition to all these developments, French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye was understood to have given Undersecretary Welles assurance that the Vichy government is not planning to fortify its Western Hemisphere island of Martinique, that there are no German officers or men in the French African port of Dakar, and that proper technical precautions had been taken to prevent the French fleet from becoming a menace to either Great Britain or the Western Hemisphere.

ing ovation. A band accompanied him clear to his private car, and he doffed his gray felt hat and waved repeatedly at the throng assembled there before going inside.

Riding through the main business district of the city, past the State House where he once was the highest official, he had passed directly under a banner proclaiming the candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie.

If he saw the banner, he gave no evidence of it. He was busy waving a hand at the people clustered along the thoroughfare.

Earlier, a special train took Mr. Roosevelt from his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to Watervliet, where he drove through one of the Army's biggest and oldest arsenals.

After a White House car had stalled and held up the procession for a few minutes, the President said at a press conference that the 2,700 employes at the arsenal would jump to about 5,000 next May, but, in line with a policy of not putting all defense eggs in one basket, he said additional expansion of plant facilities was not contemplated.

Willkie Attacks Jersey 'Bossism'

dium he hammered home his charge that the third term is supported by corrupt "political machines just like the Nazi party."

The President, defense touring in the Watervliet section of nearby New York, was charged by Willkie with using defense "inspections" for political purposes, and dragging Europe's war into the political campaign.

The Republican throng roared its appreciation of Willkie's prediction that the G. O. P. "will sweep this country in November" on the basis of "a real count of the real votes of real people."

It booed allusions to Hague, and references to him as vice chairman of the Democratic committee.

It booed "the third-term candidate" and it roared as Willkie told of seeing the President's campaign poster on Hudson County's empty stores. He called that "an appropriate place."

He said political bosses will get "something" out of the third term—"maybe it's protection on their income taxes, I don't know."

He interpolated that the "bosses" are rich men "although they have no ostensible jobs to make them rich."

Mayor "I-am-the-law" Hague had passed out word that Willkie was to be treated with "courtesy." Confetti was tossed from one Jersey City building, and a blaring loudspeaker system even whipped up some enthusiasm in the Journal Square throng.

But it was Haugue "orders" for coutresy that angered Willkie.

"How did this fellow get that way?" he shouted. "Can't you make a speech without his permission."

At Jersey City and again at Newark Stadium tonight he compared Hague's Jersey political machaine with Nazi Party domination of Germany.

He charged that the New Deal "seeks to perpetuate itself in power with a combination of the greatest bunch of corruptionists and racketeers that ever existed in America."

Boarding autos in central New York at 9 a. m., Willkie ferried the Hudson then raced on to stops at Jersey City, Edgewater, Hackensack, Paterson and Kearney before broadcasting his major address in Newark. Boos and "We want Roosevelt" shouts came on the way from roadhide watchers in industrial areas, but the Republican-organized meetings were orderly with good turnouts.

Tonight at Newark he repeated many of the charges that have been rolling off the Hague machine's back for years.

He charged Hudson County ballot boxes are stuffed with illegal votes obtained from fraudulent registrations.

He recalled that the poll books were burned when a legislative investigating committee sought access to them.

He recalled that Norman Thomas and labor leaders were run out of town for attempting free speech.

He said Hague was among Mr. Roosevelt's "closest lieutenants." Other leaders of this "new liberalism" he said were the "commisioner of sewers" of Chicago and "the boss of the Bronx," the latter of which Willkie will invade tomorrow.

Because of his confidence in the strength of these machines, the President, he charged, declines to discuss the issues "and pretends not to know whether his speeches are political."

Willkie's opening salute to Hague at Jersey City was marked by such a bursting of skyrockets at the start that Willkie called out "cease firing."

Thence Willkie shot on to Edgewater and Hackensack, where he cried: "Clean out the Hagues." He said if New Jersey voters would elect Robert Hendrickson Governor, "He and I jointly will send some fellows on some trips."

"I'll tell you what you can do," he said. "You can reduce your enthusiasm to practical, hard-headed work. See the different voters and get them registered. See that they vote. Bring in people to vote and if you do it we cannot lose."

Next he stopped at Paterson, Passaic County, scene of 1935 silk and dyeing strikes, but now humming with defense program of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. Paterson, like Hackensack, is Republican, and 15,000 jammed into the Armory to hear Willkie.

Here he attacked James H. R. Cromwell, Doris Duke's husband and Senatorial nominee, as "a playboy."

The Political Arena

Every man, woman and child in the United States has benefited, directly or indirectly, "through Government aid to business under the Roosevelt Administration," Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones said over a Nationwide radio hookup last night.

JONES

Under auspices of the Democratic National Committee, his address was interpreted as a direct bid to business to back President Roosevelt's race for a third term.

"Government and business are necessarily interdependent and must get along," he said. "Government makes it possible for business to operate, and business must support Government through its earnings. The Government must be the umpire.

"There always will be occasional irritations where some in business are annoyed at what they consider Government interference. There always will be Government representatives who unnecessarily antagonize business . . . All of these are the exceptions . . ."

Jones said the operation of the RFC, on whose board he served under former President Hoover and which he has headed for the last seven years, demonstrated the attitude of the Roosevelt Administration toward business.

"It is generally conceded that the RFC has helped, and in numerous instances saved, business, big business, medium-sized business and little business," he said, "the business, the investments, the employment and the means of livelihood of people of every political faith, Republicans, Democrats and Independents alike.

House G. O. P. Lauds Willkie-McNary Bid

A House Republican conference last night unanimously adopted a resolution commending Wendell L. Willkie and his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, for the "splendid work they are doing in preserving the American cause to the country." The resolution said the House members were fighting "shoulder to shoulder" with Willkie, McNary and "other patriots who are gathered under our banner."

National Chairman Joseph W. Martin told reporters that a national trend in favor of Willkie had started ten days ago. He minimized the importance of polls showing the G. O. P. candidate to be trailing President Roosevelt and pointed to the large noncommittal vote in these surveys.

"Our polls indicate that 25 per cent of the Democrats are going to vote for Willkie," he said. "A party cannot stand desertions like that."

4 Senators Condemn Willkie's Utility Record

Four Senators yesterday engaged in spirited condemnation of the utility record of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate.

The attack was touched off by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who took the floor of the Senate to reply to Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, who last week stoutly defended Willkie and accused the latter's critics of engaging in a "smear campaign."

Reiterating his charges that Willkie's nomination was forced by "the Wall Street utility crowd," Norris again accused the G. O. P. standard bearer "and his utility friends" with destruction of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News because that paper opposed the "power trust."

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, joined in the attack.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, referring to Willkie's call for observance of October 23 as "no third-term day," said the American people will set aside November 5 (election day) as 'no Willkie day.'"

Congressional Recess Stymie Vexes Leaders

Rayburn Expects Decision of Some Sort Today or Tomorrow

Despite a poll of Democrats and a meeting of Republicans, Congressional leaders were still uncertain last night as to how long a recess—if any—would be taken before the election.

Declaring that the decision would be made today or tomorrow, Speaker Rayburn reiterated yesterday that he favored a recess from this week until November 18.

An informal poll of House Democrats revealed—among some 80 members—a ratio of about five to one in favor of the long recess. But with many Democrats absent and the Republicans voting solidly in opposition, it was very possible that a resolution for recess to November 18 would not carry.

Republican leaders indicated after a conference yesterday that party sentiment favored meeting every three days or recessing with a proviso that Congress could be called back by its own leadership.

The Democrats, however, are not expected to agree to a proviso of that sort, as they feel it would constitute a reflection on the President. The three-day recess—by which the House would meet formally only on Mondays and Thursdays—is also viewed with disfavor by the Democratic leadership.

Some Democrats were predicting that if they could not pass a resolution for recess to November 18 without "strings," the only alternative agreeable to the majority would be remaining in session every day. This suggestion was viewed as a threat to the Republicans that, through daily quorum calls, they would be held accountable for their absence unless they consented to recess until after election.

Navy, Marines Soon To Call Reservists

Volunteer Category May Be Ordered Out for Training

Navy and Marine officials last night expected that Washington's 1,000 Organized Reservists would be called to active duty within the next two or three weeks.

At the same time it was reported that Volunteer Reservists, i. e., those not in organized units, who are presently exempted from the mobilization call, may be ordered to report for training.

Meanwhile, although no units have yet been mobilized, the Nation's 28,000 Organized Naval and Marine Reservists have been ordered to "stand by."

Other local defense activities:

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, chief registration officer, announced that more than the necessary 7,200 volunteer registration clerks are available for the October 16 listing of the District's 95,000 selective service eligibles. Half of the volunteer corps will be teachers.

Registration workers will be notified by the end of this week, and Monday they will meet at local schools for instruction.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District selective service executive, announced he would submit to the President Thursday a list of medical advisers and legal advisers, to represent both the registrant and Government, who will assist the 24 five-man selective service boards.

At that time, Gen. Cox said he would reveal the Commissioners' choice for the Registrant Advisory Board.

The Fifth Battalion, Organized Marine Reserve Corps, will open a recruiting office tomorrow at 458 Indiana avenue northwest for fledglings as well as honorably discharged former marines and volunteer reservists who wish to rejoin before mobilization. The office will be open tonight, tomorrow, Thursday and Friday evenings.

The Hotel Association of Washington, through its president, L. Gardner Moore, announced that jobs of employes in local hotels who volunteer or are selected for military service will be restored upon honorable discharge.

British Ask Soviet Join in Aid to China

States.

Conversations in Moscow have proved so far that the Soviet Union is not so upset about Japan's deal with Rome and Berlin that she is prepared to forget her squabbles with Britain.

Stalin is still upset about Britain's refusal to turn over £3,000,000 in credit held here in the name of the Baltic countries recently annexed by the Soviet. He resents the British attitude that Russia incorporated these countries under duress, and until this problem is straightened out it is unlikely that any deal will be reached.

Through the economic power of the United States, Russia may be brought into some kind of limited deal over the Far East, but nothing is likely to make her change her policy of neutrality in the West.

In her war and trade agreements, Britain has demanded that the country with whom she is negotiating agree to limit exports to Germany. Russia refused to admit Britain's right to have anything to say about what the Soviet Union did with its own exports, and the negotiations broke down. Evidently the British now are willing to alter this demand.

If events in the Balkans prove that Germany is out to take over Rumania and establish herself solidly along the Black Sea near the Dardanelles, another situation may arise.

So far there is no reason for believing that the Germans have hinted to the Russians that they can have that gateway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean in the final carve-up, but if it should prove that the Germans are moving that way themselves, Russia may shift her weight again as quickly as she shifted to the Axis in August, 1939.

The Russians may not be too pleased with the Germans and because they are suspicious of Japan's new Asiatic order they may cooperate with Britain and the United States for limited ends in the Far East, but the people who know what is going on in Moscow do not think the Soviet is prepared to cooperate on a large scale with Britain.

Defense Sidelights

Sums Paid to Men in Service Deductible From Gross Income

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday announced a Bureau of Internal Revenue ruling holding that sums paid to employes absent in the military service of the United States or serving the Government in other ways at a nominal compensation during the present emergency will be deductible from the employer's gross income for Federal income tax purposes.

The ruling, in response to several inquiries by business organizations, pointed out that a similar practice was followed in 1917 and 1918.

O'Leary Warns Against Freezing Price Structure

Philadelphia, Oct. 7 (AP).—John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, asserted today American industry can take defense orders "in our stride," and warned against "legislation which will freeze our price structure under the pretense of forwarding national defense."

He denounced as "unjustified" what he said was a recent effort of a member of the Defense Commission to tie up with negotiated contracts the power to refuse contracts to anyone against whom the National Labor Relations Board has proceeded.

It is "definitely an attempt to use national defense as means of coercion to force the organization of labor," he asserted, adding it is "part of a long-continued effort along the same lines."

Canada Receives 137 Overage U. S. Tanks

Ottawa, Oct. 7 (AP).—Col. F. F. Worthington's armored brigade at Camp Borden, Ont., has now received 137 overage tanks purchased from the United States, Defense Minister J. L. Ralston said today.

"Of 60 more tanks to come, 75 per cent will be ready for immediate training purposes," he said.

Ralston expressed "my warm appreciation of the prompt action of the United States in shipping these tanks."

New Deal Farm Measure Weak, McNary Holds

Needs Strengthening To Reach Goal of Old G. O. P. Bill, He Says

By the Associated Press

Northwood, Iowa, Oct. 7.—Senator Charles McNary declared today that although he would not "totally condemn" the Agriculture Act, it needed "strengthening" to attain the goal of the old McNary-Haugen farm bill—the payment of parity prices for that portion of crops domestically consumed.

In an address written for delivery in the home town of the late Representative Gilbert Haugen, co-author of the twice-defeated farm bill, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee said that although the measure failed of passage, "the proposals established a principle that later found favor.

"That principle was that the farmer deserved some relief from the disadvantages pressed upon him by the tariff and his subserviency to world market prices.

"The principle has fretted Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace. It has been honored in certain parts of New Deal farm legislation.

"Under the McNary-Haugen bill, the machinery of relief would have been farmer-controlled, farmer-owned and paid for.

"In its stead, we have a program Government-owned, Government-controlled and paid for out of the public Treasury."

McNary said that the "virtues" of the Agricultural Adjustment Act "outweigh its demerits," but it needed "modification so that the producer may exercise a dominant share in policy making and administration."

Dr. Anita McGee, Spanish War Veteran, Buried

A military funeral was held yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery for Dr. Anita N. McGee, believed to be the only woman commissioned as an assistant surgeon in the United States Army.

Dr. McGee, who was 76, died here Saturday at a nursing home, was buried in a plot beside her father, Admiral Simon Newcomb, U. S. N. Services were conducted by Gen. Nelson A. Miles Camp, first unit of the United Spanish War Veterans, of which she was a charter member. The Sixteenth Infantry Band and a platoon of Regulars from Fort Myer escorted the funeral caisson to the graveside.

Participating in the rites were Senior Vice Commander Joseph F. Thornberg, Judge Vincent A. Osterman, Elvin M. Luskey, John F. Farrell, and Charles C. Lewis. A native of Washington, Mrs. McGee served as head of the Army Nurse Corps during the Spanish American War.

Vanguard Is Here For Gray Reunion

Nathan B. Forrest's Cavalry and who once, with a comrade, rode his horse into a Memphis hotel where the Yankees had made all the reservations and came out unwounded—snaps his eyes at the thought of this war. "Hitler dreads the United States," he believes.

The oldest, Burell Nash, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian, fought with the Louisiana Tigers, was wounded at Mansfield, La., and now, having been told about a strange distant war that might involve the United States observed yesterday that young men should enlist and not wait to be selected.

Nash laughs frequently, but always as at something he remembered of the last 100 years. He rode a bus here from his home in Sulphur, Okla., and on the last night of the trip ate four meals and didn't sleep. Yesterday he said he was feeling no fatigue and strolled about the hotel, looking for something to do.

Among his companions today will be 124-year-old James Edward Monroe, of Jacksonville, Fla., who is being escorted here by two girls. He will be the oldest man at the reunion or in town. His acquaintances said he went to Jacksonville when the place barely was inhabited and took a liking to the place because it afforded good hunting and fishing. He was said to have lost a hand in the war and claims to have been buried alive temporarily on the battlefield.

He works a piece of ground for a garden but he resides now in a houseboat in Jacksonville, complaining because the city has built up around him. When they refused to accept him in the Army during the World War, Monroe went to a ship yard to demonstrate his strength at driving rivets.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). New 'Crash Squad' Doubles Arrests

578 Accidents Here Checked in First 2 Weeks of Operation

By Howard F. Wentworth

Traffic charges against motorists involved in accidents have increased twofold since formation of the new police "crash" squad September 22, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the unit, estimated last night.

Although figures showing the actual percentage of increased arrests and prosecutions will not be available until at least a month of records have been compiled, Miller said the uptrend is evident in current reports from squad members.

Of arrests made for law infractions in accidents cases, approximately 90 per cent have resulted in Traffic Court convictions, Miller said. He expressed gratification over the manner in which his trained crash investigators are presenting cases in court.

578 Crashes Checked

During the first two weeks of operations, a total of 578 accidents was investigated by the new squad, Miller reported. Of these, 56 involved pedestrians.

Failing to yield the right-of-way continued to be the major accident cause, Miller declared. There were 118 such violations during the two-week period.

Driving carelessly came next with 35 cases reported; turning from wrong lane was third with 34 cases; making left turns at intersections fourth with 24, and pulling from curb without a hand signal fifth with 22.

Other Crash Causes

Among other leading accident causes as reported by squad investigators were:

Driving while drunk, 20; unsafe backing, 19; cutting in, 16; no hand signal, 15; reckless driving, 14; driving wrong side of street, 13; passing stop signs, 12; skidding, 11, and turning right at intersections, 9.

Speed accounted for only 6 of the total accidents, said Miller, while slowing down in traffic lanes resulted in 11 rear-end collisions.

Of the pedestrian accidents, 20 were struck while crossing not at crosswalks, and eleven were hit when they stepped from behind parked cars.

Gnat Car Lifted Onto Sidewalk, Owner Tells Police

Something new in excuses appeared on Maj. Brown's traffic ticket "fix list" released by police yesterday. One motorist was let off after he verified that his automobile had been lifted to the sidewalk by pedestrians.

The car, a midget coupe, was found by its owner, F. S. Klyiot, of Arlington, Va., straddled across the sidewalk where a traffic policeman tagged it with a ticket reading "parked on sidewalk." Klyiot assured police that pranksters apparently couldn't resist taking advantage of the vehicle's size and the ticket was canceled.

Seventy-nine tickets were adjusted last week. There were 65 warnings and 14 tickets canceled outright.

'Politics' in Big Business Report Denied by SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday denied charges that it engaged in "political demagoguery" in preparing a report on concentration of ownership in 200 leading nonfinancial corporations.

Commissioner Sumner T. Pike, who made the denial in a letter to Representative Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, author of the charges, also declared that the confidential SEC report to the temporary national economic committee, first disclosed in The Post, had not been released to newspapers by the SEC.

The report, revealed last week, stated that ownership of the 200 corporations was concentrated in a few hands, with the duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller families holding a dominant position.

Pike pointed out that he had supervised the report in its final stages and, he emphasized, "as I am a Republican, that ought to set at rest any notion that it was designed as an aid to the Democratic campaign."

Posters Explaining Cause, Cure Of 14 Diseases Sent to Schools

Three thousand cardboard posters explaining the cause and cure of 14 communicable diseases were distributed yesterday throughout the District's public school system under auspices of the District of Columbia Health Department, School Board and Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The posters pictured various phases of communicable diseases from first symptoms to ultimate cures. In certain types of illnesses, the posters also pointed out preventative measures.

A total of 50,000 paper replicas of the cardboard posters were distributed to elementary school pupils for them to take home to their parents.

Mrs. Lucian Jordan, chairman of the P. T. A. Congress' child hygene committee said the poster distribution was the first step in a program to "educate" parents in the prevention and cure of communicable children's diseases.

Civil Service Bill Goes Back To Conference on Merit Issue

By Edward Ryan

The House yesterday ordered its Civil Service conferees to take the Ramspeck bill back and win Senate agreement to the Nichols apportionment plan for extending the merit system, after Republicans and Democrats combined to vote down, 181 to 132, a joint conference report calling for passage of the measure.

Opponents of the Ramspeck bill, which would permit the President to bring up to 200,000 Federal employes under Civil Service through non-competitive exams and raise the pay of more than 300,000 field employes, predicted that the action of the House spelled eventual defeat for the measure, even if the Senate agrees to the Nichols program.

Representative Nichols, of Oklahoma, led the Democrats' attack on the conference-approved bill with a plea to Congressmen from States whose Federal job quotas in Washington are unfilled to vote against passage.

Would Bar Over-Quota States

His amendment, approved by the House in February and stricken out by the Senate, would bar employes from over-quota States from receiving Civil Service status under the Ramspeck bill until the quotas of all States were filled. Nichols declared that residents of the District, Maryland and Virginia, and other States were receiving an unfair share of Government jobs.

Until all the State quotas could be brought up to par, hundreds of District and nearby residents would be barred under the Nichols plan from appointment, transfer, or promotion to any job converted into civil service by the Ramspeck bill.

Friends of the measure, however, including its author, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, were hopeful that the House instructions to restore the Nichols quota system would still permit the legislation to be salvaged and passed at this session.

Ramspeck said he would talk to Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, who led the fight for passage of the measure in the Senate, and "see what we can work out." Senator Mead returns from New York today.

Three Votes Takes

The House instructions, Ramspeck indicated, may leave the way clear to alter details of the Nichols plan, if necessary to win agreement in the Senate, and to bring the revised program back for a separate vote in the House.

The course of the bill yesterday was fixed in three votes, after an hour of debate in which Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said that the only way to force the Civil Service Commission to obey the State job quota rules would be to put his plan in the bill, and Republican leaders protested that bringing thousands of employes into civil service examinations was "lip service" to the merit system.

Ramspeck's original motion to approve the conference report—approval would have sent the measure on its way to the White House for the President's signature—was defeated, 181 to 132, on a roll-call vote. A moment later Ramspeck, on a voice vote of 123 to 110, won the chance to take the bill back to conference. The House immediately, on a motion by Nichols, voted 164 to 42 to instruct the conferees to get agreement on the Nichols plan.

Keller Withdraws Support

Until yesterday the Nichols plan has been going in and out of the Ramspeck bill under the name of the Keller-Nichols amendment. Its second author, Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, told the House during debate that he was withdrawing support from the amendment.

While it was apparently the Nichols amendment that turned the bill back to conference, one member estimated that between 65 and 70 votes had gone against approval because of a clause to prevent the Civil Service Commission requiring job applicants to submit photographs. The pnotograph prohibition was introduced by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana to guard against racial discrimination in hiring Government employes.

Guard Salary Raise Vetoed

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed and sent back to Congress a bill to raise the salaries of guards at naval establishments.

The President said the bill was "objectionable," among other reasons, because "it requires an increase in the rates of pay in the guard force in one branch of the Government service without applying the same increase to the guard forces in the other branches of the service."

"On a number of cases I have expressed myself as not being in favor of salary legislation which would give preferential treatment to a single group of employes," President Roosevelt said. "Legislation of this type simply discriminates against other equally deserving groups."

Not A Local Project

District officials should take careful note of the move to have the local government pay part of the operating expenses at the Washington National Airport to be opened next December. A few members of the House would take delight in saddling part of that expense on the local community.

In announcing his intention to give the District "an opportunity" to share the expenses of operating the new airport, Representative Taber drew an analogy that has no bearing on the issue. "If your town or mine gets an airport," he said, "we have to pay for the land, part of the construction cost and for its maintenance." In this case, however, Washington is not "getting" an airport.

The new $14,000,000 landing field at Gravelly Point has been built by and will be operated by the Federal Government. The site was chosen by Federal officials without regard for the wishes of the local community. At present the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is sponsoring a boundary-adjustment bill that would place the new airport wholly in Virginia.

Of course, the District will have no control over the National Airport, nor even a voice in its management. The project has been constructed and will be operated as a Federal enterprise under the administrator of civil aeronautics. It will serve air transport lines from which the Government will collect fees and, on special occasion, military planes will undoubtedly be accommodated.

Incidentally, officials in charge of the project insist that its operating revenue will exceed expenses. An appropriation for operation of the project is essential, it is said, because receipts from concessions are to go directly into the Treasury. If it should develop that the airport has an operating profit, would Mr. Taber have that profit divided with the District?

It is true that the Government has spent a large sum of money at Gravelly Point to build a model airport. But not a nickel of this sum has been spent by or on behalf of the District of Columbia. The airport is strictly a national project and should remain such. If its operation brings profits, they should go into the Federal Treasury. And any losses should be courageously followed by adjustment of fees and concession charges.

The Burma Road

Last July Great Britain gave way to Japanese pressure and agreed for a period of three months to close the famous Burma Road to shipments of war supplies to the armies of Chiang Kai-shek.

This action was bitterly protested by the Chungking government and was denounced by friends of China everywhere as a move likely to result in more harm than good. With all of China's ports on the Pacific in Japanese hands, with the Indo-China railroad barred from carrying arms and supplies to the Chinese forces, the closing of the Burma Road meant the severance of the sole remaining link between free China and the overseas world.

The motive behind this action was understandable. Great Britain hoped, by satisfying Japan, to secure a breathing spell in the Far East at a moment when she was fighting for her very existence at home. The Japanese would not be appeased, however. The closing of the Burma Road produced no moderation in Japanese policy. On the contrary, it was interpreted in Tokyo as a sign of weakness and, therefore, as a signal to move farther and faster along the road of aggression. Symptomatic of this trend was the Japanese invasion of Indo-China and the conclusion by the Tokyo government of a treaty of alliance with Germany and Italy.

The British government has now courageously decided to reverse the trend manifested by last July's closing of the Burma Road. It is reported from London that on October 17 this vital artery will be reopened to full traffic. Free China will thus again be in a position to supply her armies with arms, munitions and implements of war to supplement her own meager production. She will thus be in a better position to continue the struggle against Japan.

By that token, Japan will find it more difficult to carry out the bombastic threats made by some of her spokesmen against Great Britain and the United States. For Britain's decision parallels the action taken by the Roosevelt Administration recently in cutting off scrap iron exports to Japan and in advancing a $25,000,000 commercial loan to China.

In the Far East China is fighting the same battle against aggression that Great Britain is waging in Europe and with the same indomitable will. China's struggle thus naturally enlists the aid of other nations that fear the spread of aggression.

The 40-Hour Week

Col. Philip Fleming, administrator of the Wage-Hour Law, reminds employers that after October 23 a working week of 40 hours will be mandatory for all industries covered by the act.

This announcement follows the launching of a gigantic defense program which will make heavy demands upon the man power of the country and put its producing facilities to a severe test in the months to come. It is a virtual certainty that in many defense industries longer hours of work will be required to compensate for shortages of skilled craftsmen, and to avoid serious production bottlenecks. Yet at this critical time the restrictions of the 40-hour week are extended to cover an estimated 3,000,000 employes now working longer hours.

One of the strongest arguments heretofore advanced in favor of a shorter working week is that it spreads work and provides more jobs for idle labor. This argument is open to challenge even in periods of extreme depression. And it is obviously inapplicable to the conditions which we are likely to encounter in the immediate future.

To be sure, the 40-hour week has already been secured by large groups of organized workers, without the aid of coercive legislation. But these voluntary restrictions on hours can always be removed when changed conditions call for increased efforts. When working hours are fixed by law, however, they can be lengthened only in accordance with the terms of that law.

Thus, while the wage-hour law and the Walsh-Healey Act, applicable to employers awarded Government contracts, permit any amount of overtime work, the employer has to pay time and a half for every hour of that overtime. Such penalties, of course, raise production costs and put employers under pressure to cling to the statutory working week, unless they are able to shift the higher costs to buyers by charging more.

It follows that the alleged flexibility of the wage-hour law is largely illusory. Legislation of this sort is calculated either to add greatly to the cost of the defense program or to retard its completion if restrictions on working hours are rigidly observed.

Even in an emergency it would be unwise for employers to introduce excessively long working hours detrimental to health and efficiency. But a 40-hour working week (barring a few exceptions) is a concession to labor's desire for greater leisure. It is a luxury which may be safely enjoyed under normal conditions by a country with abundant resources and an adequate labor supply.

But so short a working week may become a dangerous check on production in an emergency necessitating a rapid speed-up of industry in the interests of national defense. Demands for temporary suspension of Federal restrictions upon working hours, at least for employes in strategic industries, will undoubtedly become increasingly insistent as defense preparations proceed.

Strange Contradiction

It is easy to see how differences arose between Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and the Department of State over the wisdom or necessity of sending another ship to Great Britain to evacuate American refugees. But that does not account for the contradictory statements from Washington and the American Embassy in London as to whether such a refugee ship had been requested.

Some of the refugee ships previously sent to England have returned with many vacant cabins. A relatively small number of Americans in the British Isles preferred to remain there, in spite of State Department warnings that they would do so at their own risk. That fact fully justifies the Department of State in making a careful investigation of the demand for return passage before deciding whether to send another American vessel to the war zone.

But why should a spokesman for the department deny that a request for another refugee ship had been made by Mr. Kennedy? A statement to that effect brought a quick reply from the Ambassador, along with details as to when his request was made. Secretary Hull appeared yesterday to acknowledge receipt of an appeal from Mr. Kennedy when he said that the department is giving attention to the problem of evacuating Americans now wishing to leave Great Britain.

If there are two places more than any other from which contradictory statements should not be issuing at present, they are the Department of State and our embassies in foreign lands. This incident may be a minor affair. Yet it sharply emphasizes the need for fairness and candor in discussion of public issues at a point where misunderstanding and contradiction may be extremely dangerous.

Rumania As A Base

The dispatch of a German division and an unknown number of Italian troops to Rumania raises an important question regarding the future policy of the Axis in the Balkans.

Ostensibly these troops are being sent to protect the Rumanian oil wells, vital to the Axis, against possible attack by Great Britain. One German source is quoted as saying: "We haven't forgotten British designs on Baku and other oil points." But it is difficult to accept at face value this explanation of what amounts to the first stage in the military occupation of Rumania by that kingdom's "protectors."

The nearest British forces happen to be many hundreds of miles removed from the Rumanian oil fields and, at this moment, are fully occupied in repelling the thrust of a numerically superior Italian force aiming to reach the Suez Canal. Moreover, there is not the slightest evidence to suggest that the Rumanians themselves are incapable of defending their oil wells. They have certainly managed to do so without assistance up to now, and there is no reason to believe that they could not continue to do so indefinitely.

It is more than likely, therefore, that the invasion of Rumania cloaks unexplained purposes. Insofar as Rumania requires "protection" at all, she requires it not against Great Britain but presumably against Russia which recently seized Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina. The occupation of Rumania by German and Italian forces would thus seem to be directed against the Soviet Union. It may be designed to intimidate that nation into standing by while the Axis carries out whatever plans were agreed upon by Hitler and Mussolini at the recent Brenner meeting.

Certainly the Axis will be in a position to threaten not only Britain's life line in the Mediterranean but also the Russian lifeline which runs from the Black Sea to the Aegean. Rumania, in other words, may be a springboard for an attack on Turkey and British positions in the Near East. Such land action would avoid some of the dangers involved in an attack from the direction of Libya. With Great Britain in unquestioned control of the Mediterranean, the supply routes from Italy to Libya are at the mercy of British sea power.

What, then, will be the Russian attitude toward the Axis move in Rumania? To stand by and do nothing would mean the establishment along her Balkan flank of a force which at some future time might constitute a real menace to her security. Unless Russia is so weak as to make complete inaction advisable, the latest Rumanian developments may accelerate that rapprochement between Great Britain and the Soviet Union which the Churchill government has been trying hard to bring about.

Middle Or Mythical?

Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, Republican candidate for Senator, opened his campaign with an appeal directed especially to the men and women of the "middle classes." Under his expansive definition this so-called middle class embraces about everybody who is not a trade union member or on relief. Home-owning, savings, life insurance and small business, Mr. Barton considers typically middle class institutions, jeopardized by the policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

One may agree that ultra-low interest rates, and fears of inflation tend to discourage saving, while heavy taxes are a deterrent to home-owning. But small shopkeepers, white-collar workers and professional men are no more concerned about such matters than factory workers. There is no real divergence of economic interests—no middle class whose interest in a financially sound America is greater than that of other classes.

Instead of stressing class differences—a policy which weakens and divides a people—our politicians should be emphasizing the identity of interests of all classes. Certainly the trade unionist who contributes to an old-age insurance fund has as vital a stake in sound governmental finance as the small shopkeeper whose insurance is privately placed.

Mr. Barton's assumption that the middle class is discriminated against because it is unorganized likewise proves to be untenable. As a matter of fact, the heterogeneous groups brought under his classification are unorganized as a whole because they have no common objectives for which to organize. But many specialized forms of organization do, in fact, exist, among small businessmen, among professional groups, and to an increasing extent among white-collar workers.

On analysis, the distinctions which Mr. Barton tries to set up lose their validity. So why accept this statement that middle class men and women "more than anyone else must be counted upon to keep alive the liberties and responsibilities of democracy?" That is the duty of everyone.

You're supposed to have free speech in this country, but it will cost you something to say what you think to a traffic cop.

Political Wrangling

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: A great deal has been said in regard to the Democratic Administration creating class dissension, and even hate, but to my mind there is no more truth in that accusation than there is in the statement that Mr. Willkie and his adherents are cultivating class hatred to the nth degree, for there is no more intensive hatred in America than that of the monied people against Mr. Roosevelt and even against his family.

For instance the recent meeting of the bankers' association in Atlantic City was more of a sounding board for captious criticism of the Administration, and Republican propaganda, than for the promotion of the bankers' industry. It was manifested in every principal address, and even evidenced in the prayer offered at the opening session by the minister of the gospel.

This is a campaign of paradoxes. The very people who have been helped most—especially the lawyers, bankers and businessmen—are the worst haters, while Mr. Willkie, who is calling for unity, is now castigating the Administration and doing more to cause dissension among the people, seeking to undermine their confidence in their President, than anyone else. This at a time when we face the most momentous period in the life of the Republic, when great issues, both national and international, will have to be solved.

It just does not make sense and seemingly justifies the criticism of the dictators that democracies are a failure.

D. C. Housing Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We would like to take this opportunity to answer the letter from "Victim of Circumstances," which you published in The Post of September 21.

"Victim of Circumstances" is not alone. Thousands of single people in the city are faced with the same problem. Thousands of families are also looking for decent homes within their means. Twenty thousand Washington families are living in dwellings which, from a decency point of view, should be torn down immediately. The people of Washington pay more for their housing than do those of any other city in the United States. With the advent of new Federal employes for the defense program the situation is becoming more acute.

Alone, "Victim of Circumstances" can do very little to put into effect the solution which he proposes. The Federal Government has a responsibility toward its employes, and Government built and operated apartments would improve housing conditions considerably. No subsidy would be required, as Federal employes earn enough to pay the costs of decent apartments, if they are made available at cost, without the profit that private enterprise must have, but between the recognition of this responsibility and the actual construction of such apartments lies much hard work, organizing those who suffer from bad housing into an articulate group.

New Aims And Purposes

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Confidence of the people, especially the creative and productive forces of the people, in their Government and in their public officials is the first and last line of defense of any democracy. The people do not have that confidence in Mr. Roosevelt and in the New Deal today.

Mr. Roosevelt entered into a contract with the people in 1932 to reduce the cost of government, to abolish bureaucratic agencies, to maintain a sound currency, to bring about a balanced budget and to encourage production. During the first five months of his Administration, when it appeared that he intended to respect his contract, the country made the most phenomenal recovery it had during any equal length of time.

Then the President launched his program to reform our system of government through the various alphabetical agencies designed to regiment, restrict and control our entire economic life. As a result of the persistent socialistic regimentation of the economics of our country, the New Deal has inoculated agriculture and industry with economic malaria. And for the first time there has been an actual decline in our national wealth.

And though the New Deal has expended better than $50,000,000,000 and burdened the country with a national debt that now seriously hinders our defense program, it has neither solved any of our major domestic problems nor provided adequate defense. It has degenerated millions of our people in their thinking to where their creative impulses no longer exist.

Conditions in this country under the "we planned it that way" depression of the New Deal are comparable to those that existed in Germany when Hitler came upon the scene. One day, out of the despair that was Germany, there came a dynamic personality—Adolf Hitler. He was ignorantly brilliant. He extracted something from every creed, philosophy and theory and rolled it into a religion called National Socialism. He brought to this strange concoction the dream of Mohammed, the class hatred of Karl Marx, the trickery of Machiavelli, the propaganda genius of American advertising, the Greek mythology of the Trojan Horse and the ruthlessness of the American gangster. He took this religion to the youth of Germany and gave them aim and purpose. They became aware of a new destiny while they became indifferent to toil and sacrifice. They found joy in living that they might have an opportunity to die. We do not like their methods or purposes, but we must admit that it lifted them up to find a purpose beyond themselves.

If we are to preserve our liberties and continue to advance our standard of life, we, too, must have a leadership capable of redefining our aims and purposes, and capable of interpreting America as meaning more than the privilege to demand of the Government that it feed and coddle us; or, the right to hang around the telephone all day waiting for someone to call us up and tell us we have won a pot of gold.

The economic and labor conditions which the New Deal has created both in the South and in New England have put in motion competitive forces which are destructive of the best interest of both sections, and unless we return in both sections to the American system of free enterprise, we are going to bog down in our own confusion, thereby denying unprecedented opportunities for both labor and capital. "Peglerizing" Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Amid the galaxy of wonders in an era of wonderful nonsense, not the least wondrous is the phenomenal rise of Pegler from pugilism to politics. Henry Armstrong's singular achievement in annexing three titles in the cauliflower industry is easily surpassed by the wholesale conquests of your gladitorial columnist in the turbulent arena of domestic and international affairs.

After establishing his mastery as an interpreter to the yokelry of fisticuffs and allied sports, Dr. Pegler focused his intelligence upon the dark and dreadful world of labor, law and government. Not since Socrates have we beheld—and to the consternation of gyps and malefactors everywhere—so devastating a confounder of unsound opinion, morals and policy.

May I confide my serious intention to tear up my free public library card, and to junk a laboriously gathered collection of dog-eared literature on the social sciences. Why not? For three cents per diem Prof. Pegler will instruct me, in plebeian prose, in all there is to know about the skullduggery of organized labor, the smelly cynicism of practicing politicians in a phony democracy, and the cunning of dictators and their gauleiters in this unfair enough world.

As an honest befuddler of the Middletown mind, Comrade Pegler is in a class by himself. The peculiar effectiveness of this bull in the journalistic china shop arises from the fact that he is not a demagogue. For he passionately believes in his uninstructed prejudices. This intellectual infancy reminds one of Lord Byron's reminiscences of his first visit to Italy. When the bard got off the boat he was besieged by a horde of beggars. From this he concluded that Italy was a nation of beggars.

Similarly, when Brother Pegler discovers a gold brick in the labor movement he forthwith concludes that all unions are run by crooked and corrupt functionaries. Apparently, the profounder social significance of organized labor as an instrument for collective bargaining, as a weapon with which to resist the imposition of a submarginal standard of living, is too abstruse for his understanding.

The Virtue Of Idleness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent your editorial "In Praise Of Work" in The Post of September 30, I have a comment from the pen of the Irish poet and agriculture economist A. E. (Geo. Wm. Russell):

"I have a complaint against the United States. It arises out of Longfellow's 'Psalm Of Life.' That poem is drilled into every child. They never forget the line, 'Let us then be up and doing,' and America has been 'up and doing' ever since. That is the cause of all your economic problems. You are working people so hard that you have, naturally, overproduction. You should cultivate the adorable virtue of idleness."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A compliment and a suggestion.

The compliment. Section three, the editorial section, of The Sunday Post. Excellent.

The suggestion. Publish in book form your weekly resume of the war news for the first year of the war. It is excellent material. I believe it would have a national as well as local appeal. Its value lies in the fact that it is fact and not editorial opinion.

I think you have a fine paper, and that includes Pegler.

School-Days In Brussels

WHEN THE American Ambassador was recently recalled to "explain" his alleged interview in London that Belgium would be a "howling hell" next winter, memories came crowding in upon me of seven happy school years and many subsequent visits spent in Brussels, one of the gayest little capitals of one of the most contented and prosperous, mind-your-own business countries in Europe.

Well do I remember that misty September morning, toward the close of the last century, when I accompanied my father up the winding path that led from the gate through the grounds to the main building of the school group, then on the outskirts of Brussels, but now within the city limits. I, then a boy of about 11, was trying, not too successfully, to conceal my nervousness. After chatting awhile with the Head, and handing me some pocket money, my father told me to be a "bon goss" (good kid), and left me to adjust myself to the strange environment.

The adjustment began immediately, for the Head said something to me in French, and took my pocket money away from me. I thought I was being robbed. It was only later, when a 14-year-old "prefect" boy conducted me to a dormitory for some 36 pupils that I understood the spending money would be doled out to me weekly.

About 200 boys in the school were drawn from nearly every country in Europe and the Americas, and at least one from Japan, and we represented every class of society, from one heir to a throne down through petty nobility to commoners like myself. The instructional language was French, and theoretically we spoke nothing else—a rule enforced in classrooms and dining hall; but on playing fields and in dormitories we spoke a school "argot" composed of elements of every European language, for every race had made a contribution for 30 years, so that a newly entered boy had to learn simultaneously French and the school "slanguage."

The school was not military, and there was no drill, but discipline was strict, without being harsh. Older boys were appointed "prefects," and there were a senior and a junior prefect in charge of each of the six dormitories. The faculty were kindly, bearded men in black frock coats and high silk hats. The program was heavy and the hours were long, 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., with a luncheon interval five days a week, and 8 to 1 on Saturdays. Signals for arising, meals, classes, bedtime, etc., were given on long, deep snare drums, and it was a distinction to be "tambour." We stood beside our desks, palms of the hands front, as a "maitre" entered and left the room, shouting in chorus our salutations.

Formal team-games, such as football, had not yet been introduced in those years, and our compulsory exercise consisted of gymnastics, fencing, swimming, roughriding horseback and country hiking. A dormitory at a time, we were taken to the opera, and at one of the earliest productions of the then new "Butterfly" occurred an amusing scene. There is some stage "business" in the first act when the American Consul asks Lieut. Pinkerton to have a whisky-and-soda. Few Belgians had ever tasted whisky, or even seen it, and when the "property" tea, or other colored liquid, was served, one tenor poured out for the other tenor and himself two full kitchen tumblers of "whisky" which, had it been real, would have brought "Butterfly" to a sudden close. The few Americans and British in the audience laughed, but the Belgians never saw the joke.

Belgium a "howling hell" next winter! Belgium, home of some of the best cooking in the world! Our meals were excellent, better than an American or British boarding school would serve, and all of the boys were taught the essentials of "cuisine a la Belge." Part of our regular ration, issued with our dinner every night, was a demi-litre of beer week-nights, and a demi-litre of wine Sundays. I never saw a boy drink water, any more than strong drink; and I never saw a boy drunk. The custom might be introduced here with good results.

Clad in our simple school costumes of dark shorts (knees bare), blouse with the tails worn outside, and a hooded cape for bad weather, we roamed the surrounding countryside Saturday afternoons, trailing red flannel through the streams to catch frogs, whose legs we promptly fried with wild mushrooms in skillets carried for the purpose. Our relaxations were simple. Not often did we establish contact with girls in their boarding schools, and inter-school dances were unknown, but we used to see them walking sedately two-by-two in long columns called "crocodiles," and youthful nature being what it was, is, and ever will be, where there was a will there was usually a way.

Belgium a "howling hell" next winter! Who made it that way? That gay, little half-million capital that I learned to love! The barracks of the Household Cavalry Brigade, the famous "Guides," was near school, and sometimes the whole column of 1,000 green-uniformed horsemen, "trompettes en tete" would pass nearby, resulting in my prompt desertion of class, or any other activity, for I simply couldn't miss the "Guides," even though I had to construe a hundred lines as penalty. Sometimes the late King Albert, then the young heir to the throne, would lead his own Regiment de Grenadiers past his uncle, the spade-bearded King Leopold, and the young prince, blond hair and beard, and blue eyes, looked an ideal soldier in all his 75 inches.

And the Nazis say they are not responsible for feeding their late enemies in the "howling hell" they have made. Belgium, without ambitions of conquest, has no enemies. Belgium, trying desperately to remain neutral, asked only to be left alone. Belgium of my school days: those long horseback rides through the Ardennes, those long walks through the Bois de la Cambre. And I've lived to see my lovely Brussels twice occupied by the alien Huns, whose "kultur" can never be culture; may this second occupation be brief!

Today And Tomorrow

The Japanese Pressure On American Opinion

THE PUBLICATION of the Pact of Berlin has been followed by an interview of the Japanese premier, Prince Konoye, in which he tells us that the United States must "positively cooperate with Axis construction of a new world order" and that "whether the Pacific will become the scene of war or peace depends on whether Japan and the United States respect and understand each other's position." What we must understand and respect and also "positively cooperate with," he tells us, is Japan's leadership in the Far East.

THE QUESTION then is just what Prince Konoye means by positive cooperation with Japan. Americans are under the impression—and if they are wrong, Prince Konoye should lose no time before correcting the impression—that Japan wants the United States (1) to give no further aid to China, (2) to approve the Japanese blockade of China by accepting the permanent closing of the Burma road, (3) to cease protesting against the violation of our treaty rights in China, (4) to withdraw all opposition to anything Japan may choose to do in the Philippines, in the Netherland Indies, in Indo-China, in the French and British islands of the Pacific, in Australia, and in Singapore, (5) to make no arrangements with the British for the use of naval and air bases in the Pacific, and finally (6) to cooperate positively with Japan's conquest of the Far East by selling Japan all the materials she needs and by providing her with the money to do this through continuing to buy her exports.

We believe that Japan is saying that in the Far East we are to abandon the Chinese, the Dutch, the British, the Australians, the French, and that in Europe we are to abandon the British. We believe we are being told that we are to assist Japan in making herself supreme in the Far East and in most of the Pacific, that we are to assist Germany and Italy in making themselves supreme in Europe and in the Atlantic, and that if we do, then the three Axis powers who are bound together by a ten-year alliance will, as Prince Konoye puts it, recognize our leadership in the Americas. We think this means that they will permit us to overrun and conquer our neighbors from Mexico to the Argentine as they are overrunning and trying to conquer the nations of Europe and all the peoples in the Far East. We understand Prince Konoye to say that if we will agree to stand all alone, scuttling all our friends on both sides of us, then the three totalitarian states standing firmly together for the next ten years will permit us to do what they will permit us to do. We think he is telling us that if we will agree to be completely isloated in the face of a ten-year triple alliance, then we shall have achieved that respect and understanding and positive cooperation which Prince Konoye says is the only way to maintain the peace.

THERE ARE, to be sure, some Americans who think we should accept this program, a negligible few because they sympathize with the Axis, a great many more because they feel that the Axis is too strong to be resisted until the American defenses have been strengthened. The signing of the Pact of Berlin and the statement of Prince Konoye compel all of us who have favored a Fabian policy of conciliation with Japan to reconsider our position. For we know now that Japan will not negotiate a reasonable settlement which will preserve the independence of any of the other peoples of the Far East. But what is very much more important to the United States, we begin to see now that the net effect of the Berlin-Tokio policy would be to make it impossible for us to build adequate defenses.

In spite of the fog of the political campaign, the American people will realize that this is what the new Triple Alliance means. For they will say to themselves—in fact, they are already saying to themselves: If this is the way we are going to be talked at now from Tokio, Berlin and Rome, now while the Germans are being blockaded and bombed, while the Italians are confined to their harbors, and while the Japanese are entangled in their long Chinese war, how shall we be talked at if we not only permit them, but positively cooperate with them, in destroying the British and the Chinese? If this is the way we are to be threatened today, what will Tokio be saying if Japan has finished with China, has occupied Singapore, conquered the Philippines and the Netherland Indies, put her hands on the oil and rubber and tin of the Far East—and what will Berlin and Rome be saying if at the same time their warships and airplanes are loose in the Atlantic?

Desirable as it would be to sit still and do nothing in the Far East until we have another Navy and 50,000 airplanes the fact is that if nobody is left in Europe and Asia to check the Triple Alliance, we shall then, with all the arms now contracted for be relatively weaker than we are today. The conquest of China and the Netherland Indies and the destruction of the British power in the Far East would add more naval power to Japan than we could hope to offset in a ten-year building program. Therefore, if we merely sit still and do nothing to check the conquest of the Far East, we shall, in spite of our best efforts, not be growing stronger; we shall in fact be growing weaker. If today, when Japan is held up in China and is dependent upon supplies from us and from the unconquered East, we wonder whether we are strong enough to say to her, "so far and no further," how could we hope to talk as equals to a victorious Japan with the whole East under her dominion?

THIS IS the way the American people are bound to look upon this matter, and therefore the Japanese will be well advised to moderate their language and to restrain their actions. No good will come to them if they continue to force the American people into a position where the risk of not taking positive measures to maintain their security will appear to them a much greater risk than the risk of taking positive measures. The American people are reluctant to come to this conclusion but it will not require many more threats and many more aggressive acts like that in Indo-China to convince them that they cannot sit still while all their potential allies are destroyed and the strategic keys of the oceans are taken over by the triple alliance.

Motives And Problems

HANS OTTO STORM'S "Count Ten" (Longmans, Green, $2.50) spreads a larger canvas, tells a colorful story and introduces vigorous characters. The action starts and closes in California and Eric Marsden, the hero, looks on life from a Far Western vantage point. He does some quite shocking things, and some clever and brave ones; he is one of those rare men who really tries to think for himself, and he could not possibly be more American than he is. Next to his intellectual honesty his best gift is a capacity for doing technical jobs well. And there is more to this than mere skill.

It was with will and judgment that he hit upon the way to build a shanty by throwing mud at a cane-stalk wall—that and a sort of conviction. This happened when he was a "stoop" laborer on a Mexican ranch and it resulted, oddly enough in his marrying a half-Indian girl and becoming a furniture maker. But before he got to Mexico, he had been a lineman in Arizona. When the power company forbade the men to organize, there was a meeting and a shooting and four men fled across the border. Eric's best friend had been Charlie Schroff, aging but undaunted labor organizer.

JUDGMENT AND conviction came into question again when Eric laconically agreed to rig a new mast for Langdon Sear's yacht and subsequently sailed the Pacific for nearly a year, taking Charlie with him. This section of the book is intensely adventurous and ripping, always taking account of motives as well as deeds, laying characters almost surgically bare. The portrait of Langdon Sear is a remarkable performance; it is penetrating and sympathetic yet it leaves the profound impression that men like this romantic exploiter are distinctly on the side of evil. After Sear's death when Eric more or less steps into Sear's shoes, it becomes increasingly important that Eric's life must somehow be different.

All about Central and South America he goes prospecting, inspecting, listening, hiring and firing men, exploiting labor, serving "the company"— and the whole business makes him feel dirty. By now he is powerful, important, a man among men, until somewhere in the Colombian interior, he one day decides that he has had enough. That he happens at that moment to get half-killed in his plane only make a sudden change in his way of life more certain. When his broken bones knit together, he throws up his job and becomes a furniture maker again. But this time he has achieved an inner clarification and certainty, is less self-centered, knows approximately what he believes—and soon he is mixed up in politics and—for the second time in his life—in prison. The first time had been when he was quite young, during the war, as a conscientious objector.

"Count Ten" covers the wide range of man's destiny; it contains an unusual wealth of action and of philosophy, it is an impressive, exciting and intelligent story. The characters illuminate all kinds of problems—especially the ageless one as to how a man may save his soul, how be an individual and yet a member of society. Honest Charlie Schroff, who grows old and tired in the service of labor, Sear with his ruthless and kingly ways, his sharp-tongued wife, the boy Christopher, sailors, electricians, ranch hands, thieves and politicians come, one after another, into sharp focus.

Bygone Elections

By Paul N. Furman

PRESIDENT JACKSON named his successor in the election of 1836. Without his potent backing, Martin Van Buren could not have been nominated or elected.

VAN BUREN

Opposition to Jackson and his complete domination of national politics led to the birth of a new political party, known as the Whigs, in 1836.

The Whigs, organized in 1834, agreed on only one thing—hatred of Jackson.

AT JACKSON'S insistence a Democratic convention was called to meet in Baltimore on May 20, 1835.

The Democrats at their first convention in 1832 adopted the rule that candidates must have a two-thirds vote to become the nominees. That was in force for 104 years, being replaced by the majority rule at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia in 1936.

Most of the 626 taking part in the proceedings were officeholders. Tennessee sent no delegates. But a man named Rucker from there happened to be in Baltimore. He was admitted and cast 15 votes for that State. From his name sprang the word "rucking."

By these means Van Buren was named unanimously, and Col. Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, was nominated for Vice President.

THE WHIGS presented in opposition Gen. William H. Harrison, of Ohio; Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, and Judge Hugh L. White, of Tennessee.

Van Buren had a small popular majority, but a clear majority of the Electoral College. Johnson polled only 147 of the 294 electoral votes. Francis Granger, of New York, had 77. As Johnson did not have a majority, it devolved upon the Senate to elect. Johnson was chosen on the first ballot, being the only Vice President chosen by the Senate.

Selective Service Rules Urge Leniency in Dependency Cases

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Selective service headquarters published official regulations governing the deferment of men from selective service yesterday which instructed local boards to resolve "any reasonable doubts" in dependency cases in favor of deferment.

Detailed rules governing the classification of men under selective service and deferments for reasons of occupational status, conscientious objections and dependency are set forth in the regulations, which have the force of law. As approved by President Roosevelt, the "instructions to local boards" carry out the intention of national selective service headquarters that all possible leniency sould be exercised in the deferment of married men.

The regulations make plain, however, that the responsibility in the classification of the 16,400,000 men of selective service age as to those who will go and those to be deferred rests with the local boards.

"This should be accomplished so as to give equal and fair justice to all," it is stated. "The entire administration of the selective service law shall be impartial and free from any political influences. There shall be no discrimination for or against any person because of his race, creed, or color, or because of his membership or activity in any labor, political, religious, or other organization."

Under the regulations, a man who is dissatisfied with his classification may appear in person before the local boards and ask that his status be changed. If still dissatisfied with their ruling, he may take his case to an appeal board. Employers and labor unions, it is provided, may also appeal local board rulings as to classification of men because of occupational status.

Under very exceptional circumstances, and only in dependency cases, a man can appeal from the appeal board to the President.

Rules and regulations governing occupational deferment are broad, giving local boards great discretion in determining who is to be called for military service and who should be deferred because a job is deemed "necessary."

Explaining the regulations governing such deferments, a statement issued by selective service headquarters said:

"The local board is to defer a registrant considered to be a 'necessary man' where he cannot be replaced satisfactorily and where his removal would cause a material loss in effectiveness, provided that the maintenance of the registrant's particular occupation is necessary to national health, safety or interest in the sense that it is useful or productive and contributes to the employment or well-being of the community or the Nation.

"Due consideration to this point of view is to be given where, among other things, nondeferment would be likely to impede the National Defense Program.

"These rules apply to deferment of Government officers and employes just as to any other occupation, except where specifically covered by law. They are designed to permit deferment also of 'necessary men' who are apprentices or students, if they meet the tests given."

Frederick Osborne, chairman of the President's selective service advisory committee, said the instructions dealing with deferment of married men make no distinction against those who have married since the passage of the Selective Service Act. Boards should consider such cases on the question of dependency alone, and not take into account whether the marriage might have been contracted to avoid military service.

Divorced wives are considered dependents under the regulations when they are actually dependent upon the alimony payments of the former husband. The fact that a man may be out of work and is not contributing in fact to the support of a dependent for the present does not prevent a man from being deferred for dependency "if such persons and the community look upon the registrant as the normal source of such person's support."

The general instructions on dependency declare:

"The local board should determine all questions of class III (dependency) deferments with sympathetic regard for the registrant and his dependents. Any reasonable doubts in connection with dependency should be resolved in favor of deferment, and in doubtful cases the local board should be mindful of injuries which may be expected to result from separating a father from his children or a husband from his wife. The maintenance of the family unit is of importance to the national well-being.

"No hard-and-fast rules will work. Each case must be weighed carefully and decided on its own merits. What is reasonable support in one locality or in one set of circumstances may not be in others."

Defining the term dependent, it is prescribed that such a person must be a citizen or live in the United States or its possessions (ruling out fathers and mothers of naturalized citizens who live abroad) and who meet the following other tests:

"Such person, at the time the registrant is classified, must depend in fact for support in a reasonable manner, in view of such person's circumstances, on income earned by the registrant by his work in a business, occupation or employment (including employment on work relief projects but excluding employment as an enrollee in the Civilian Conservation Corps and similar employment in the National Youth Administration).

"Such person must in fact regularly receive from the registrant contributions (including payments to a divorced wife) to the support of such person and such contributions must not be merely a small part of such person's support."

To avoid hearings on cases of many conscientious objectors, who under the law may be deferred from military service (but who may be required to perform nonmilitary duties), it is prescribed that persons making claims for deferment on this ground be first classified in all other respects and be physically examined.

In making public the new regulations, selective service headquarters declared that they "are probably the most important regulations to be issued in preparation for the mobilization of the military manpower of the United States." While local boards have broad discretion in determining deferments, it was stated that they "will be governed basically by the regulations promulgated."

Fair Enough

The Naive Age Passes

MY OWN POLITICAL childhood ended and adolescence set in about 1932, when I voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt and the repeal of prohibition. The economic crackup, which began in 1929, did not then seem to me to be anything worse than a few cauliflowered fenders and a smashed windshield. I was still thinking of the crash as a just come-uppance for a lot of swindlers in the banking and promotion rackets and a mishap to many comparatively petty gamblers who were nickling down dinky side bets in the market.

Many of these had run up an original taw of $100 or $500 to $100,000 or half a million in paper profits; and it was too bad for them but, after all, no worse than they had a right to expect, because, in gambling, if you don't know when to take down you are sure to be knocked into the creek eventually. They were just back where they started.

I HAD SEEN a lot of country-club bankers and corporation boosters around the ringside at the big fights and following the golf tournaments and sometimes had wondered when they ever found time to put in any licks at the mysterious business which was yielding them such great wealth. They were an excited, money-proud lot—most of them rather young, too—and they had bars in their homes and offices and vaults full of liquor which ran up to $90 a case for Scotch and for champagne. It just didn't seem sound to me that men with responsibility and the affairs of companies in which the people were investing their money should have saloons in their offices.

In my newspaper experience there had been men who would keep a slab of toddy in the desk and gnaw off an inch now and again during the day, and an occasional old growler with a tomato nose who was supposed to suck up his quart at home every night after work, but we never had any bars.

Well, so, as I say, when we left the road and hit that tree back in 1929 and began combing splintered glass out of our hair I thought we would soon have her running again, and when Mr. Roosevelt came along I figured he would be the one to do it.

I EVEN THOUGHT. In a vague way, that he would juice up the engine so as to save gas and get more speed out of her and maybe streamline the body. Anyway, I was for him, and I had a lump in my neck the size of an egg the day he stood on the county-fair scaffold in front of the Capitol in Washington and said the only thing we had to fear was fear.

"There," I thought, "is my President. Ain't he something?" I am a little reticent about such emotions in print, so I guess I didn't write it, but I thought it. I felt it.

I didn't cover the banking inquiry in Washington, but I did follow the story, and nobody took more pleasure from the spectacle of those crooks getting their lumps from Ferd Pecora. But I still didn't realize what the boys in the Administration were up to, and I doubt that many Americans did, or do yet. The town was full of strangers which, of course, was natural, because the Democrats were closing in for the jobs and the Republicans were thumbing it out of town by every road. But a lot of these strangers were not merely strange, but politically queer, and there were so many rumple-haired, tweedy-looking study-muggs and rather sallow, flat-heeled females among them talking ideology stuff that I began to wonder "What is this, anyway—a government or college?"

ONE OF THE MALE double-domes who has since become a very big man in the New Deal once explained to me that economics was very much a matter of psychology, and I asked him why they didn't get an alienist for his job, but he just thought I was being flippant. I guess I was, at that.

Well, what I thought was that they were going to junk and salvage the busted banks and companies, pass some laws to prevent the recurrence of any such fabulous nonsense, send a lot of gyps to prison, particularly lawyers who had devised the clever little schemes, and start over. And, of course, prohibition was to be repealed so that the Government could get out of the nasty business of poisoning the hootch and frisking people's homes and a man could rub his vest buttons against a bar again and be a man. And the billion dollars a year which we would get out of the liquor taxes and the additional taxes which the State, counties and towns would take from the dealers and saloons would solve everything, and we would all go back to work again.

I was that dumb.

Dangerous Sequence

By Mark Sullivan

Revolutionary Change

WHAT IS HERE written is about an intricate subject. It is difficult to make clear. But it is vitally important, it is a matter of national life and death, for America to understand.

The process by which the United States is being taken toward revolutionary change consists of the sum of many different steps, and the relation of these steps to each other. No one step is readily recognized as having revolutionary effect. Never does Congress pass an act saying, "The United States hereby adopts socialism, or communism," or as it is often put vaguely, "a new order." Never does anyone in the Administration say "Take this step in order to carry the country toward revolutionary change." The single step, standing alone, seems plausible, and may be reasonable. But the sum of the steps, and the way they fit into each other, is as certain a path toward revolution as any that occurred in the totalitarian countries of Europe.

An illustration is an opinion handed down last week by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. Mr. Jackson's opinion is to the effect that findings of the National Labor Relations Board are binding upon other departments of the Government. This affects Government contracts. The effect is that if an employer is in violation of findings of the Labor Board, such employer shall not be given any contract for defense work; such employer is blacklisted.

That action, standing alone, does not seem revolutionary. But consider the whole series of steps, into which this fits—steps already taken, and future steps which this one makes automatically inevitable.

FIRST, CONGRESS enacts the National Labor Relations Act, and under it creates the Labor Board. This is for the purpose of protecting collective bargaining. With that objective all agree. But the act is so written that it gives to the board, or permits the board to take to itself, powers which Congress did not foresee.

Next, Mr. Roosevelt appoints the Labor Board. The appointees (excepting one recent one) are accused of bias. Not only is the board accused of bias by employers. It is accused by the American Federation of Labor of being biased in favor of the more radical labor organization, C. I. O.

Next, the board makes extremely harsh findings of what constitutes "unfair labor practices." In one case, they held it an unfair labor practice for an employer to refuse to rehire workers who had engaged in a sit-down strike. In another case, they found an employer in violation of the law because he had denied employment to two men who had never in their lives worked for him—the employer was required to give back pay to those men from the date they had applied for employment.

Those are illustrations of Labor Board findings. There are hundreds of others.

This brings us to the present step. If an employer is under any one of hundreds of findings by the Labor Board, he cannot get a Government contract. The employer has not had time to appeal to any court. Or if he has appealed, the court has not acted. No matter. The employer can get no Government contract.

That is the result of the present step. See what follows:

These Government contracts are a large part of the current business of the country. Because an employer cannot get any Government contract, he lays off some of his workers. There is increased unemployment. And one employer, by not getting a contract, forces unemployment upon subcontractors. It becomes an endless chain of unemployment.

THIS IS MATERIAL for the radical New Dealers. They repeat the cry which is their argument for socialism. They say that industry cannot or will not provide employment. Consequently Government must.

That is one path toward socialism. There is another. Government provision for unemployment leads to great Government borrowing. And great Government borrowing, if carried far enough, leads, as Mr. Roosevelt has said, toward breakdown of our existing form of government.

The particular set of steps here described works toward socialism by the process of making it difficult or impossible for privately owned industry to operate. That process—to make private ownership unworkable—is a certain formula for bringing socialism.

Other processes work to the same end, whether by making private industry unworkable, or by other means. Most of the processes have this same essential feature, that one step leads to a second, the second to a third—and so on to the end, which is automatic and inevitable.

Many individual steps in the chain, as presumably in the present case, are taken unwillingly by persons upon whom they are forced by the previous steps.

Peace Group to Meet At Library Park Today

In a move to support a Congressional resolution asking repeal of the selective service act, the Washington Peace Mobilization has announced that an open air meeting will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. today in Library Square, Eighth and K streets northwest.

Scheduled to speak at the meeting are Joseph B. Cadden, secretary of the American Youth Congress; Jack Zucker, of the United Shoe Workers of America, and Hudson Wells, president of the Washington Peace Mobilization.

The Tufts Alumni Club of Washington opened its fall activities yesterday with a luncheon at the Army-Navy Club, Seventeenth and I streets northwest. Frank C. Waldrop, political writer, spoke.

"Man of Aran" Peel Castle Tweeds

The iridescence of the sea—the brilliant color of natural vegetation dyes—the ruggedness of the crags and cliffs—the simplicity of the women who leisurely loom this natural, rugged cloth while their men go down to the sea in ships—is demonstrated in these colorful tweed suits which we so proudly offer.

Those having seen the cinema, "Man of Aran," several years ago will remember the dramatic background against which these hand-woven tweeds are made by the hardy natives of these Islands, explaining in part, the character of this handsome, durable fabric. The suits are hand tailored by one of America's best makers according to our exacting specifications. Extraordinary values.

'Rock' Paid High Tribute In His Film Biography

'Knute Rockne—All American' a Rare Picture; August Champions Were Really Champs; This, That and the Other About the Theater

TIMELY TO A SPLIT SECOND, "Knute Rockne—All American," unspooled for the drama desks and sports writers yesterday afternoon, is far more than another "football picture," in the usual sense. It is a comprehensive history of the evolution of the modern gridiron game which, during this month and next, will lure hundreds of thousands of spectators to the sidelines. But over and above all this, it is a faithful and unsentimentalized study of the genius of the football field, only one phase of whose career and character is intimately known to the masses of his admirers.

BELL

Knute Rockne was more than the greatest of football players and coaches. The son of immigrant parents—his father was a carriage builder who came to this country to exhibit his handiwork at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago in 1893—Knute entered college late, but graduated from Notre Dame magnum cum laude. The faculty did its utmost to induce him to continue in chemistry, perceiving in him qualities of a great scientist. Rockne chose football as his life work.

To him, football was more than a game. It was a medium of moulding character, inculcating in "his boys" the highest ideals of honesty, sportsmanship and humility—combined with an unconquerable fighting spirit. A stanch faith in the highest ideals of Americanism was part of his creed. It is to this aspect of the man that "Knute Rockne—All American" is primarily dedicated.

This is not to say that football is slighted during the action of the picture. It is merely to say that while the film is rich in thrilling sequences involving all the famous players Rockne brought to eminence, its major purpose concerns itself with matters more profoundly important to the individual and the Nation.

It is as fine a biographical film as I have seen, and I suspect that a majority will entertain the same view when they see it on the Earle screen, beginning Friday.

Since it seems not to be a private fight being waged by divers and sundry concerning the merits and demerits of the screen version of S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," we might as well risk a bump on the nose by taking sides. So we take both sides. We agree wholeheartedly with our Mr. Coe that the picture completely violates the tempo, temper and temperament of the original stage play. We also agree with those who contend that it is an amusing and highly diverting entertainment on its own account. As to the "prologue" prefixed to the Behrman portions of the play by the Epstein boys, adherents of the original work assuredly will resent it. Those unfamiliar with the stage version won't know the difference. Frankly we are a loss as to what else might have been done. Photographed literally and verbatim, "No Time for Comedy" would have been a dangerously static conversation piece on the screen. As it is, it isn't Behrman, but it is fine fun.

While we are bordering on the topic of top pictures, it might be of interest to know that the August box-office champions—as compiled from key-city ticket wicket reports by the Motion Picture Herald—were six in number and reflective of reasonably sound public judgment. They were "All This and Heaven Too," "Boom Town," "I Love You Again," "Pride and Prejudice," "The Return of Frank James" and "The Sea Hawk." That makes three for M.-G.-M., two for Warner Brothers and one for Twentieth Century-Fox. All have been seen and approved in Washington.

A bulletin from Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington manager of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season at the National Theater, indicates that by the time the books are closed they will bear the names of approximately 5,700 subscribers. This compares rather more than favorably with Detroit's 3,500 to 4,000; Pittsburgh's 4,000 to 5,000; Buffalo's 2,000 and Baltimore's 3,000. But then, look at the head-start we had. Most of those are new subscription cities.

Dots and Dashes

Columbia Pictures has exercised an option on its popular star, Cary Grant, which calls for him to make four pictures for the company in the next two years . . . The first will be "Penny Serenade," with "Royal Mail" and "There They Go Again" next on the docket . . . Tomorrow will make the ninth week of Jack Stack and his Barter Party at Sidney Lust's Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier . . . His unique stunt is the biggest hit the house has ever had . . . Day Tuttle and Richard Skinner, formerly identified with the Washington Civic Theater, will present Brandon Thomas' comedy, "Charley's Aunt," at the Cort Theater, New York, beginning Thursday night, October 17 . . . "Charley's Aunt" has been around so long she refuses to divulge her age . . . And she's still funny . . . Robert Gibbons, student manager for six months at Loew's Palace, has been promoted to the assistant managership of the Loew house in Wilmington, Del., . . . Conglomerations, if it's not too late.

Bob Crosby Is an Actor By Accident

Young Band Leader Signed for Lead In RKO Picture

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Oct. 7.—George Robert Crosby, Bing's kid brother, became a movie actor today; he was absolutely certain of it.

To doubters such as us, he displayed a red pass issued by RKO studios and it said in black print: "Admit Bob Crosby, actor."

The 26-year-old Robert is well known to you, in case you're a jitterbug. The last four-and-a-half years Bob Crosby and his Dixieland band, including the Crosby Bobcats, have been playing in supper rooms and night clubs all over America.

A few weeks back he and his bandsmen were tootling at the Casino in Catalina Island, but nary a thought about grease paint. RKO was preparing to shoot a comedy drama entitled, "Malvina Swings It." Kent Taylor was scheduled to be the leading man, but he turned down the role.

The story had to do with a spinster school teacher (Elisabeth Risdon) who wrote a high school song which was so bad it became a novelty hit.

Quick on the Dotted Line

A worried studio executive went to Catalina to relax. He heard Crosby's band and decided that since the title role was that of a band leader, why not hire a real one? He offered the job to Robert, who signed before the movie maker changed his mind.

Bob brought along his orchestra, too, and that necessitated rewriting the story into a musical, with production numbers and the whole works. When the scenario was finished, the head men decided their Malvina title was not so good; they changed it to "Let's Have Music."

One of the big features of the new picture is Bob's hit song, "The Big Blow From Winnetka." He already has sold 80,000 recordings of it and he has to play it a dozen times a night to satisfy the demands of his fans. "The Big Blow" was as much an accident as his movie career—and as profitable.

Actor Crosby said he guessed it was a funny world. We guess he's absolutely right.

New York, Oct. 7.

DURING THE BOMBARDMENT of Helsinki last winter the cast of "Life With Father" contributed an ambulance to the Finnish cause. That ambulance was christened "Vinnie," in honor of the role Dorothy Stickney portrays in that show. Because the Russo-Finn armistice was signed before that ambulance could leave this country the vehicle was sent, instead, to France . . . Last week the young American who drove "Vinnie" in France came backstage to meet Miss Stickney. He told her how well "Vinnie" had acquitted herself—of his driving, with eight wounded inside, through a ghost city where 100,000 people once had lived, without finding a single person there. He stole food to keep those wounded alive and then returned to this country . . . "We'll never forget what you've done," said Dorothy. "We'll always remember you for this" . . . "You'd remember me in any case," the young man replied. "Because my name's McCarthy. Charlie McCarthy."

MICHAEL FARMER, the former husband of Gloria Swanson, still is in Biarritz. Shortly after the Nazi troops arrived there Farmer decided to fraternize with some of the officers, pending his obtaining of the papers required for his departure. He sat in one of the Biarritz cafes, where a group of Nazi officrs joind him in a drinking party . . . The next morning the Gestapo arrived at his room. They searched it thoroughly and examined all the clothing he wore—to make sure that he had taken no notes concerning the conversations he had had with his drinking companions of the previous night.

THE CITY COUNCIL'S committee investigating the civil service will bring charges against a relative of Mitzi Somach, former secretary to Mayor LaGuardia . . . Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, has completed a book about power and is sending it to publishers for release before election day . . . Mrs. Thomas Corcoran, who worked as her husband's secretary at the RFC, resigned from her job last week . . . Sanford Meisner, of the Group Theater, will portray that much-publicized title role in "The White-Haired Boy," the new comedy by Beatrice Kaufman and Charles Martin.

EDDIE CANTOR reminisced last night about Will Rogers. He told of accompanying Rogers to the office of the Detroit Free ress, where a Christmas toy fund was being raised. Rogers placed $1,000 on the desk of the fund collector, who asked: "What is your name, sir?" Rogers replied: "What difference? That wouldn't make the toys any better" . . . Cantor was with Rogers when they were called to entertain at the White House in 1918 before President Wilson, Lord Balfour and Secretary of War Baker. Balfour expressed anxiety over America's ability to train enough soldiers in time. "Don't worry," said Rogers. "When you train an army to go only one way—forward—that takes only half the usual time."

CANTOR COLLECTED every article written by Rogers, as well as the transcrips of every speech and broadcast Rogers ever made. It's the most thorough Rogers collection ever gathered by a private individual . . . "I'll never part with this," he vowed to Mrs. Cantor, "until I meet a man who loved Will Rogers more than I did" . . . When Eddie played at a theater in Fort Worth he met Amon Carter, the newspaper publisher, who took Cantor to his home, where Eddie saw Will Rogers' photo, with a candle lit before it. The walls of Carter's study were lined with Rogers' pictures. They sat and talked about Will until 5 a. m., when Cantor returned to his hotel and wired Ida: "Put my Will Rogers collection into a crate and ship it to Amon Carter, Fort Worth, Tex."

VINCENT SHEEAN, who flew back from Europe last week, went to see "Foreign Correspondent." That movie was to have been based upon Sheean's "Personal History," but Director Alfred Hitchcock discarded the book and worked from a completely new script. Sheean liked the movie . . . Marion Mill-Preminger, who has returned from Hollywood, has accepted luncheon dates with all callers who phoned to welcome her home. "But you're not going to feed me," she told them all. "Lunch will be at the Pierre October 15 for the benefit of the Mobile Feeding Units to Great Britain" . . . Franz Boas is one of Nicholas Murray Butler's targets.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 7 (INS).—Sylvia Sidney, who once left Hollywood and said she hoped never to return, has completely changed her mind. I guess that's what being really happy does for a gal. Sylvia is so in love with her husband, Luther Adler, and she is also a proud mother. Now the chances are that the Adlers will make their future home here, for Warners are talking a five-picture deal with Sylvia. They took a look at her rushes in "Carnival" and are completely sold on her.

PARSONS

Her next after "Carnival" will probably be "January Heights," Bette Davis' new movie. The two women roles are almost of equal importance and Bette always welcomes another actress of ability in her pictures.

Madeleine Carroll will never give a performance better than the one she gave on the air a few weeks ago. She put such feeling into her voice that it brought tears to the eyes of those who were listening to the British war relief program. There was a reason for Madeleine's emotion, for not only is her mother living near Dover but Count Richard de Larozier, the French aviator to whom she is engaged, is now in Vichy. Madeleine told me that she was never able to contact him, but he finally wrote to her from Africa. Now he is in unoccupied territory, so she plans to try to go to him. She is leaving in a few days for Canada, for the "Northwest Mounted" preview, and from there she will tour through that country on personal appearances for the Red Cross. "And then," says Madeleine, "I'll get to Vichy some way."

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Constance Bennett telephoned from Reno to say that she has taken a house and will live there until after her divorce. She is keeping the settlement she made with the marquis very quiet, but I happen to know she gave him property in France which she owned and some valuable pearls; was that Beryl Wallace, Earl Carrol's heartbeat, with Conrad Nagel at the Bar of Music? It looked very much like her; Maureen O'Hara and John Shelton have discovered each other; Mary Martin is the only girl I know who could rejoice over seven pounds of added poundage; Ida Lupino is wearing a gorgeous new antique amethyst ring, the gift of her husband, Louis Hayward.

Betty Grable and Vic Orsatti are seeing a lot of each other these days; the Jack Bennys are pricing houses in Palm Springs. Looks to me as if this is to be a big season at this winter resort, since many people plan to live there during the winter months; Arrowhead Springs is also getting lots of winter reservations, for this spa is in a class by itself and a wonderful place to reduce. Mrs. Jessie Donahue lost ten pounds there; Wesley Ruggles and his bride have been vaccinated and are now ready for that South American jaunt.

John Scott Weissmuller was christened at the Grace Cathedral Church in San Francisco; Bo Roos flew up to act as godfather; Ann Gillis is nursing a big bump on her head caused when a motorboat turned over and nearly drowned her; Rosita Moreno is back among us after three months as a star in a musical at Buenos Aires. She leaves next week for New York and a Broadway show.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 7.

There's always something so homey about seeing a gang of actors you hadn't laid eyes on for a long time, and watching the camaraderie without any petty jealousies when they get together. At the dedication services Sunday, when they unveiled a plaque at Columbia Square, I chatted with Bill Farnum, who looks as well as he did when he put me in pictures 25 years ago. He's reading the story, "One Foot in Heaven," which Jack Warner bought. I do hope Bill gets it, because he's made more speeches from the pulpit by request than any member of our profession. He's done so much good—when he had it, he gave.

HOPPER

The word has gotten 'round here that if you'd like a visit from the stork, you should join up with Gracie Allen and George Burns. Five of their associates are expecting—their secretary, Lucille Helt; those two smoothies, Charlie and Little Ryan; Writer Dane Lussier, and Producer Wayne Griffin.

With all the actresses in town, doesn't it seem curious to you that they'd pick one of the prettiest, Virginia Bruce, to play "The Invisible Woman?" Seems such a waste of what God gave her.

I don't know many Americans who are prouder of their citizenship than Claude Rains, who's been one of us for more than two years. As you probably know, he's playing David Belasco in "The Lady With Red Hair," and while he doesn't look much like David, he has that same dynamic quality of authority.

Even though Dottie Lamour is in love with Greg Bautzer, it came as a shock when she learned that her former husband, Herbie Kay, had married again.

I've had many letters asking what's become of Anita Page. Well, she's the wife of Lieut. Hershell House, member of the flying corps stationed at Manila. And I'm told by a returning commander that she's one of the finest Navy wives in the islands.

Arch Oboler is the only producer in Hollywood our picture stars fight to act for—free. He opens his winter series Friday night with Nazimova playing "This Lonely Heart," the love story of Tchaikowsky and Mme. von Meck. He's got the pick of our symphony orchestra, uses 50 men. The town's waiting—not only to hear this, but to see Nazimova as Emmy Ritter in "Escape." Oboler did the screen play of that, too.

When somebody asked what kind of a guy Vic McLaglen was, Jack Oakie said, "Oh, he's the man who won the Academy Award but couldn't even remember the name of the picture he won it for."

And Emmett Lynn said of a Hollywood actress: "She's a born busybody—she's got an interferiority complex."

District Bills May Be Put Off Until Election

Members of Senate, House Committees Plan to Leave City

By James D. Secrest

All pending District legislation, including reorganization, the District-Virginia boundary bill and the Dirksen amendments to the income tax law, will be held up at least until after election, it appeared yesterday as members of the Senate and House District committees began preparations to leave Washington.

Although it was still uncertain whether a recess agreement can be achieved, members who handle local legislation were planning to return home this week. Clerks said a quorum of either committee will be unavailable by the end of the week.

An informal poll of the special subcommittee appointed almost a month ago to hold hearings on the Kennedy reorganization bill passed by the House showed that most of them will be absent for the next month or six weeks. The chairman, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, is still in Naval Hospital.

Conferred With King

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, has held several conferences with Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, on the reform measure in the hope of getting it before the Senate before the recess. No hearings have been called, however, because of Senator McCarran's illness.

Should the House bill be revived after the recess, it is likely that it will be drastically amended to meet the objections of Senators King and McCarran.

The District-Virginia boundary bill is pending before the House District Committee. A sub-committee held a one-day hearing last week and decided to report the legislation without recommendation because of a controversy over the Washington National Airport.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, proposed an amendment to exempt the airport from the provisions of the boundary measure so as to place it entirely within the District.

Quorum Not Likely

Chairman Randolph had expected to call a special meeting of the District Committee this week to consider the bill, but it appeared last night that he could not obtain a quorum if he did.

The Dirksen amendments to the District income tax law, which were indorsed recently by the Commissioners, probably will be brought to the attention of the committee after the election if Congress resumes its normal activities. Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said he will ask that the District Committee be called to consider the bill which would clarify the existing legal confusion over the liability of persons living in Washington but maintaining a domicile elsewhere.

Harrison Acts To Guard Selects' Social Security

By the Associated Press

A thorough-going investigation of the Social Security laws, including suggested upward revisions of old-age pensions, was recommended yesterday by Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee.

Senator Harrison said he would call the committee into session to reappoint a subcommittee, headed by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, to inquire int proposed social securjty changes. These would include, Harrison said, suggested alterations in the law to preserve the benefits of men selected for the military service.

In approving the excess profits tax bill recently, Congress wrote into it provisions under which selectives and National Guardsmen inducted into Federal service could obtain cheap Government insurance. Provision also was made to preserve retirement benefits of railroad employes.

Among proposals to be studied is a bill by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, which would substitute a pension, paid by the proceeds of a transactions tax, for the present system of old-age benefits.

Supreme Court Admits 51 to Bar At Term Opening

By the Associated Press

A 23-minute session started the Supreme Court yesterday on its 1940-41 term that may produce far-reaching decisions on national problems.

Approximately 500 cases, 50 more than last year, confronted the jurists as they marched into the courtroom for the first meeting since June 3.

The pending cases include litigation involving constitutionality of the Wage-Hour Law and a dispute between the Government and Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation concerning the amounts that should be paid Bethlehem under World War shipbuilding contracts. The Justice Department has called this case of major importance, in view of the present defense program.

The session was devoted to the admission of 51 attorneys to practice and the receipt of a few motions. No decisions are expected before November 12.

Unions' Feud Ties Up Channel Job

An American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations dispute, which tied up construction of the new Recorder of Deeds building for ten days, was settled yesterday as another inter-union quarrel produced its second strike in four days.

Friday, A. F. L. employes of the A. M. Hazel Co., New York construction firm, tied up work on the $220,000 Washington channel improvement project as a protest against the employment of C.I.O. workmen on the same job. Yesterday, a second Hazel Co. job was tied up by a sympathy strike of A. F. L. pile drivers and engineers.

Yesterday's strike was at Eleventh street southwest and the Potomac River, where a new pump house is under construction for the Washington Gas Light Co.

William Arnheim, business agent for the A. F. L. Street and Heavy Construction Laborers Local No. 456, declared yesterday that A. F. L. laborers, carpenters and engineers on strike at the channel project would not return to work until the C. I .O. workmen are removed, and their work re-done by A. F. L. members.

The C. I. O. workmen were employed by Sam Merando, Washington builder, who had obtained a sub-contract for placing pilasters along the waterfront.

The waterfront project, started last January, is due to be completed this month. It is part of a long-range $1,650,000 program for the construction of five commercial piers and three yacht basins authorized by Congress in 1935.

A. F. L. Union Balked

The dispute at the Recorder of Deeds Building started as soon as President Roosevelt finished digging the first shovels of earth for the excavation at Sixth and D streets northwest.

Ora Thompson, business agent of the A. F. L. Engineers Union, refused to permit a member of his union to operate a steamshovel at the project because all other workers there are members of the C. I. O. United Construction Workers Union.

Later a steamshovel operated by a nonunion engineer was brought to the scene, and the C. I. O. workmen, who were willing to work alongside the A. F. L. engineer, balked. Yesterday agreement was reached for the C. I. O. to provide a steamshovel operator. Work will begin tomorrow.

Philippines Would Defer Independence

"There's a growing feeling in the Philippines that it will be to the advantage of the islands if independence is deferred until such time as conditions warrant the maintenance of their freedom."

So said Diosdado M. Yap, former publicity officer of the Philippine Resident Commissioner in Washington, who returned here yesterday from a seven months tour of the islands, Japan and China.

Stating the Filipino government fears Japanese aggression, Yap said: "The Philippines are so located that Japan cannot avoid bursting through them in any drive to the south. They have almost everything Japan needs for war."

Japanese Few

Of the total population of 16,000,000 in the islands only 37,000 are Japanese, he said, adding, "They are few in number, but are doing everything possible to extend their power. . . . Already they control 85 per cent of the fishing industry."

From his observations in Japan, Yap termed the island empire "virtually a military dictatorhip." Its people he characterized as "working along as if nothing is happening" and marked by a universal respect for the works of Adolf Hitler.

"They were friendly to me because I was a Filipino," he said, "yet at the same time they were very unfriendly because I was a foreigner."

Russia Seen Neutral

Yap, from his observations in China, sees little probability of Russia allying itself with the Axis powers. He emphasized that since the closing of the Burma Road, Russia has been providing China with supplies.

Medical Preparedness

U.S. Army Better Equipped Today To Fight Disease Than in 1917

Second in a series of picture-stories showing the part medical science is playing in national defense.

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

America, looking to its health, can set its eye to the future with far greater confidence than was warranted in 1917, whether peace holds or war comes.

Today we have the "wonder drug," sulfanilamide, a most valuable tool against pneumonia, gonorrhea, meningitis and certain other infections.

Unknown in the first World War were the vaccination to protect against deadly lockjaw, immunization from Rocky Mountain spotted fever and yellow fever, the existence of a disease called choriomeningitis, the knowledge that influenza is caused by a filterable virus.

Now, in process of development and showing encouraging results, there is a vaccine against pneumonia, one of the greatest killers of them all, an advance which may put this respiratory disease in the "unnecessary" classification along with smallpox and diphtheria.

In the first World War, proving ground for the military airplane, little or nothing was known about the physiological effects on fliers of high altitudes or rapid descents. Nutrition was a word that stood for meat and potatoes, syphilis was a strictly taboo subject among the population and tuberculosis was more difficult to treat than it is today.

Many of the milestones of progress have had their origin at Washington's own National Institute of Health. Among them were the discovery of choriomeningitis, immunization against spotted fever and notable contributions to the science of nutrition. In addition, the research unit of the U. S. Public Health Service has, in many instances, advanced and refined discoveries reported elsewhere at home or abroad.

1. HIGH ALTITUDE CHAMBER—Howard F. Brubach, senior medical technician, demonstrates the decompression chamber recently installed at the National Institute of Health to test effects of high altitude and rapid descent flying on aviators. Simulating actual working operations, he pretends to be sealed in the "iron bungalow" and self-administers oxygen to keep himself conscious and alive while noting physiological reactions (pains, dizziness, etc.) under conditions identically the same as though he were 30,000 feet aloft

2. OUTSIDE LOOKING IN—Closely watching through a circular window the "human guinea pig" for possible danger signs, Horner Kuper, associate physicist, regulates the atmospheric pressure inside the chamber. High altitude investigations being conducted at the health institute's division of industrial hygiene are of vital importance to both civil and military aviation and are being depended upon to contribute liberally to the national defense program

MOUSE AND MAN . . . A vitally important tool in man's ceaseless fight to conquer the ills which beset him, the white mouse has a key role to play in research on nutrition, a subject which the defense program has brought dramatically to the fore. Napoleon said an army marches on its stomach and if there had been airplane factories in his time he probbly would have said the same of the workers inside them. Here Dr. W. H. Sebrell, Uncle Sam's ace nutrition investigator, checks the weight of a mouse that is being kept on a riboflavin-free diet

The institute at present is making the national defense program the hub of its intensive activities.

Skilled medical and technical personnel of the National Cancer Institute are being switched, where they can be spared, to more pressing assignments, since cancer is the disease of the middle aged and elderly, not of fighting men and young industrial workers.

Foreseeing the possible sending of an American expeditionary force to South America, where yellow fever is a serious problem, the institute laboratory at Hamilton, Mont., is being gagued for volume production of yellow fever vaccine.

Only in the last few weeks a decompression chamber has been acquired by the industrial hygiene division for the purpose of intensifying investigations of high altitude flying.

The institute's division of public health methods is gathering and supplying data which will be of invaluable aid in the draft.

The relationship between dietary deficiency and infectious disease is being studied in the nutrition laboratory, an investigation whose potentialities are tremendous.

Subsequent articles will tell more of these researches, spurred by the preparedness program, but whose results won't require a war to be useful to mankind.

Lee's Men 75 Years After . . .

Burell Nash

is a full blood Cherokee Indian. His age is 101 years, his step not too heavy and his terrible recollection is hunger. Once, in the Louisiana Tigers, a bitter fighting organization recruited in Louisiana for the Confederacy, Nash went four days without eating.

The memory now strikes him like a dark arrow. The attendant who came with him on the long bus ride from his home, Sulphur, Okla., to attend the reunion today at the Willard Hotel, said he eats now as if making up for his old starvation. He ate four meals on the bus Sunday night.

Gen. John M. Claypool, of St. Louis, is 95 years old and reels off his battles like the names on old battle-flags. He was with the Texan Hood and Joseph E. Johnston and was wounded three times—at Murphreesboro, Chicca mauga and Franklin, Tenn.

At Franklin he was wounded on a Thursday afternoon and lay on the field until Sunday afternoon, when two girls came out and found him. He calls the current war a "big mess, full of too much brutality—all this killing of innocent people. We fought each other in the field," he observed.

Gen. J. R. Sadler,

of Nashville, Tenn., rode in the western sections of the fighting with the most picturesque character of them all, Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, a wild frontier fighter who asserted his winning principle: "Git thar fustest with the mostest."

Gen. Sadler, with a comrade, rode his horse one day into a Memphis hotel full of Yankees. Gen. Sadler got out unhurt. He is 97 now and more active than some of the others. His recollection is less clouded. Forrest's face dangles across his thoughts. "I saw him often but never saw him smile," he said.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Fate Forces Realization of Mutual Love Upon Girl And Man Who Has Been Devoted Suitor of One of Her Best Friends; What Is Their Ethical Obligation?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One of my closest girl friends has been going with a young man for some time and is very much in love with him. About a month ago, through one of Fate's strange tricks, the young man and I found we were very much in love. At first, we did everything to fight it off, realizing the consequences to the other girl—but to no avail.

We both feel that he could never leave the other girl, unless by some miracle she should fall in love with another man, because she loves him dearly and puts all her faith and trust in him. However, I love him, too.

The problem is this: Should we (he and I) accept this love that has come to us, and find our happiness together, when all the time we would know that someone else was suffering because of our decision? Or should we put our feelings aside, for the girl's sake, and try to forget each other? We are all adults, and this is no high school romance. So far, the other girl doesn't know about the recent turn of events. Please give us your opinions as quickly as possible. Sincerely,
ELISE.

Sentimental Martyrdom Is Empty Sacrifice

DEAR ELISE: If it should be that you and the young man are genuinely in love with each other, I do not see that you would be justified in sacrificing the possibilities of mutual happiness in love and marriage, simply to maintain a deluded third person in a fool's paradise. If the young man's sudden access of love for you eclipses or cancels out his love of the other girl (and it is seldom that the human heart can embrace two grande passions at one time), he wouldn't be giving a very creditable performance, from any angle, in deceiving her about his feelings.

You say that both of you feel he could never leave her unless, by some miracle, she fell in love with another. This suggests that he feels bound to her in some way; that either she is the girl toward whom he feels the more steadfast devotion, whereas you have touched off a transient, fiery infatuation; or his past relations with her impose what he feels to be an ethical obligation.

In any event I am sure your tentative conclusion that both of you have a duty to her (despite your avowed love of each other), is but a reflection of a stand HE has taken. Just what his stand implies it is hard to say. It may mean that he has the gentle, sensitive temperament that wouldn't (as the saying goes) hurt a flea. He may feel tied, hand and foot, by the girl's emotional dependency upon him as the mainstay of her existence. And yet, admirable though this attitude would seem to be, it amounts to a form of cowardice if he now knows that he loves you and not her.

If he were pledged to marry her, one could see more reason for his faltering attitude. But I assume he isn't, since you failed to say so. Yet, even if they had long planned to marry one day, his sudden change of heart should prompt him to reconsider, to ask to be released from the engagement, no matter how painful the resultant scene might be. For he would be doing her a dubious favor either in marrying her when he loves another woman; or in continuing to play the role of her sweetheart, trading her counterfeit coin for her devotion.

While you assure me that this is "no high school romance," I am inclined to think the statement is a smoke screen. The whole situation appears to have an adolescent coloration. To the average adult (emotionally mature), with his realistic view of life and his healthy concept of his duty toward himself, the long-range constructive decision would be easily apparent—supposing he were still free to make a choice.

He would realize the futility of trying to build something worthwhile on a false foundation, on the one hand, at the expense of forfeiting irreplacable treasure, on the other hand. For sentimental martyrdom is, indeed, a futile gesture; while reciprocal bona fide love, responsibly accepted and conventionally expressed in open courtship or marriage, is a spiritually sustaining gift of priceless value.

In confusing you and deluding the other girl, your young man isn't giving a hero's performance, at the moment. Possibly he doesn't know yet which girl he really wants to tie to, and instinct may tell him to play for time in reaching a sound decision. But, if he truly loves you, I see no reason why you and he should "try to forget each other, for the other girl's sake." If he knows his own feelings, beyond a shadow of doubting, and they favor you, he will be acting most wisely in telling the other girl the truth, and letting her adjust to it as best she can. He has no ethical responsibility to act as her emotional crutch through life. M. H.

Business Found To Mix With Beaux —But Not in Office

New York (AP).—Beaux and business do mix—though not in business hours, says one of America's most successful executive career women.

She is Mary Dillon, president of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Co. and one of the few women in the United States to reach top rank in a utility company. In private life she is Mrs. Henry Farber.

"One thing is certain," she said. "The woman who has a career does much better work if there are a husband or beaux in her life. They balance her life and keep her from giving all her time and thought to her career. But naturaly beaux don't mix with business hours."

This short, slender woman, who heads a company of 500 employes, including 120 women, lists a good deal more than that in her creed for a woman's success in business.

"Most important thing," she says, "is the ability to see the whole of anything in proper relation to its parts.

'A business woman's powder puff is important, too. By that I mean that reasonably pretty clothes and careful grooming combine to make a good appearance that is an opening wedge to a job and contributes to success in it."

The rest of Miss Dillon's list includes "good old-fashioned virtues": desire to accomplish something, ability and willingness to work hard, power to make decisions, courage and perseverance in acting and "honesty, which enables you to see yourself as you are."

Smartest fall handbags are big but not enormous. They suit the proportions of both the wearer and the simple, elegant clothes she's living in these days. Illustrated is one of the most popular handbags in town at a very small price. This streamlined underarm pouch of crushed capeskin has an interior to meet all needs, especially those of the business girl. Among the many pockets is one for valuables protected with a slide fastener that won't catch loose threads, bits of paper or damage fingernails. Instead of capeskin, this roomy bag can be had in black faille or broadcloth to match your favorite town suit or hat.

The Gentler Sex

Fun for the Herd

RESUMING her series of reforms in social life, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey announced yesterday at her press conference that she would do something at once about the problem of entertaining the hoi polloi.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I observe," said the famous reformer, that the large party is now invading the social calendar. In other words, the mammoth luncheon, the mass reception and the gargantuan tea are on the boards again.

"Now these events, obviously designed for the people who don't count, have become a headache to both hostess and guests. And since they apparently must go on, I intend to put them on a scientific basis."

"You don't mean regimentation!" exclaimed an obituary columnist.

Liberty or Canapes, Issue of the Day

"I most certainly do," was the reply. "We might as well face the fact right now that we simply cannot attend large teas or receptions and retain our civil liberties."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she had been approached by several "great ladies in the social swim" who faced the problem of receiving large crowds of their husbands' employes and business associates, or of entertaining en masse organizations with which their names were associated, or of making large-scale social gestures to pay off a multitude of small social and business or obligations.

"Naturally," aid Mrs. DeGoofey, "these ladies are appalled at the prospect of having the handsome museums and mausoleums in which they dwell invaded by herds of nobodies and strangers. And, naturally, the guests also fear being turned loose in these Babylonian halls without sightseeing guides. So, with the aid of officials of the Do Something About It League, I have worked out the following plan for such entertainments:

Down at Heels, Then Stay at Home

"All guests to pass inspection at the entrance by secret service agents who will watch for concealed weapons, radical literature, questionable insignia, unsightly parcels, wet shoes, lapel dandruff, scent of moth balls, etc.

"Guests to pass through halls between a row of footmen armed with spray guns who will give them a thorough disinfecting after which they will don sterilized white hospital gowns. In seasons of colds they will also don nasal masks.

"Guests to be taken in hand by another squad of footmen who will affix large printed numbers to their backs. They will then be turned over to a squad of Amazonian assistant hostesses, designated as captains, lieutenants, sergeants, etc. Guests will be assigned to squads according to their numbers, each squad to be commanded by a 'captain' assistant hostess.

"Squads then will form in reception line to meet hostess who will receive on a dais. For protection in handshaking, she will wear a large baseball catcher's mitt.

Beware the Waiter, Is Warning

"Guests then will pass into the dining room to receive their victuals. They will be served according to their numbers, their commanding officers taking care that they do not get in the path of waiters who naturally are annoyed at having to participate in such unorthodox entertainment.

"After eating, the guests will be taken on a tour of the mansion, castle or what-not by sightseeing lecturers. Following this, they will march back to entrance hall, where their numbers, coats and masks will be removed. After inspection by secret service men of their pocketbooks to make sure they are not carrying away any treasures, they will be permitted to depart."

"But surely they will tell the hostess what a lovely time they had!" exclaimed an etiquette editor.

Bad-Mannered Gushers

GOODNESS SUE! You're either very abrupt when talking over the telephone or just t-o-o, t-o-o polite. Right now you're in the gushing sweet stage. Everything with you is "Oh, that's wonderful!" "How elegant!" or "Isn't that nice!" Such inane trivial remarks might go over big when said at the right time. But often you say them when you haven't heard a word the other person has said to you over the wire. In such instances, "Oh, how lovely!" isn't at all polite.

The other day, for example, Mrs. Blank called you to tell you that her favorite son didn't make the varsity football team. "He's so brokenhearted," she said. And you answered in a saccharine manner, "Isn't that lovely?"

Right then and there, Mrs. Blank decided that you are a rude, thoughtless young woman. Little did she realize that you didn't hear what she said, and that you thought you were very polite.

Then one night, Horace, whom you're definitely trying to impress, telephoned to say that he was leaving town. "I won't be seeing you soon," he said forlonly. "That's grand," you inappropriately replied. Horace is still brooding over your flip answer.

When you don't understand or hear what the person at the other end of the wire says, it's much wiser to say "Oh," or "I'm sorry, I didn't hear that last sentence. Would you mind repeating it?"

A Woman's Washington

By Jean Brownell

PATRONS of the Southeast branch of the Public Library may be surprised to learn that the young lady there who solves their book problems is about to become the editor of a magazine. She is Katherine Fulton of 3158 O street northwest, graduate of the National Cathedral School and Connecticut College, and the publication, scheduled to appear November 15, is "Whispers—a Magazine of Poetry." She decided last summer that it would be fun to edit a magazine instead of just reading them. "All I did was address 50 penny postcards to poets and editors," she says. "Then I sat back, folded my hands and waited for nothing to happen. To my surprise, I received 278 contributions and 50 subscriptions from all over the country. There was so much material I couldn't use that I had to order rejection slips."

Katherine Fulton

Among local contributors to the first issue are Alethea Todd Alderson, Public Library poetry adviser; Barbara Patterson, Katherine's associate editor; David Moore, Lester Ewing, Katherine Willis and Constance Warner McElhinney. Katherine herself has written six book reviews, besides soliciting advertisements and subscriptions. "I decided to try my luck with businessmen the other day," she says. "I walked into an office building and came out with 41 subscriptions."

TODAY'S QUOTATION—"Miss Thompson and I are leaving for a little jaunt into New England . . . Tomorrow you will hear from us somewhere along our way, but where we will lay our heads for the night is still in the lap of the gods." (Mrs. Roosevelt in My Day, Oct. 1.).

Too many women imitate the hair-do of some social leader or movie star, believes Monsieur Guy, hair stylist, who has been demonstrating at Jelleff's opening week fashion shows. "What is 100 per cent becoming to one person can be 100 per cent horrible on another," he says. "Before changing your hair-do, try several different styles. Get someone to give you an impartial opinion as to which becomes you most. Don't adopt a long bob just because it's the current fad; consider whether it is suited to your age, the lines of your face, your height and your personality." Monsieur Guy believes the long bob soon will be replaced by the "semi-long cut," which is neater and can be more easily adapted to different kinds of costumes.

A girl who had just reserved a Pullman chair for a trip to New York was surprised to hear the ticket agent telephone not only the car and seat number to the station, but also the word "female." He explained that the company tries to seat women next to other women, and men next to men. Then he looked at her again and said, "Oh well, I guess you're young enough to like a little fun. I'll put you beside some nice man."

Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker Moving Into Home Here

Newcomer From New York Has Taken The Gunther House on N Street; Gayest Social Season in Many Years Forecast

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A PAIR OF SEVEN-LEAGUE boots is a prime requisite for anybody who wants to keep up with the comings and goings in Our Town this season. Each day heralds new arrivals, changes of address, departures, shifting of debut dates, and plans for parties that promise to make the current calendar one of the gayest in many years.

Hope Ridings Miller

Attractive newcomers include Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker, who arrived a couple of days ago to join her husband and is now in the process of "moving in" to the Franklin Mott Gunther home on N street. With her small son and her uncle, Francis Patterson, she came here from her home in New York. Signs indicate that she will be one of the most sought-after members of Capital society this winter.

Mr. Wanamaker has been on duty here for several weeks. A member of the aviation reserve, he is working with Rear Admiral John Towers, chief of aeronautics. Mrs. Wanamaker, the former Beatrice Patterson, of Philadelphia, spent most of the summer in Southampton, Long Island, where she became a bride a little more than a year ago.

One of Georgetown's most attractive houses, the Gunther residence was occupied last year by former Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Hanes. Mr. Gunther, United States Minister to Rumania, and his wife are still at his post in Bucharest.

MENTION OF RUMANIA reminds me—the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady.

Mme Irimescu, who spent the entire summer in Meredith, N. H., returned to Washington a few days ago. Announcement of the Minister's recall was announced last month, but I understand he will not be returning to his homeland for quite a while. Leaving Washington late this month he and Mme. Irimescu will be off for an extended tour of the United States, and chances are they won't be going back to Bucharest for many months to come.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Grady are planning a brief trip to Florida. They will leave for Palm Beach Saturday and be away about a week.

HANDLING HER MAIL has been a major problem for Mrs. Charles L. McNary ever since her husband became Republican Vice Presidential candidate. So that not one letter would go unanswered, she has taken on a full-time secretary and has devoted much of her own time to penning epistles between sieges of receiving friends and accepting invitations.

After a brief stay in her apartment at the Mayflower, Mrs. McNary, with a big batch of letters still to be answered, left Washington yesterday afternoon en route to Chicago, where she will meet her husband. Later this week she will return to their ranch, Fir Cone, near Salem, Oreg., where she will stay until after the elections.

Incidentally, when she came East a couple of weeks ago, she made her first 'cross-country plane trip. "It was thrilling," she said. But just the same she's returning westward by train.

BACK IN TOWN for a few days' visit are the United States Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Norman Armour, who are at the Mayflower Hotel. A couple of weeks ago, they were here briefly before going on to Hot Springs, Va. That resort, incidentally, seems to be gathering in quite a collection of vacationing envoys. Recent guests at The Homestead were Minister to the Netherlands and Mrs. George A. Gordon, and Hugh Wilson, Ambassador to Germany, and his son, Hugh Wilson, jr. All were guests of Ambassador and Mrs. Armour at a farewell dinner Saturday evening.

WASHINGTON FRIENDS of Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright are bemoaning the fact that a recently circulated report about them is not true. It seems the rumor made the rounds in Washington, and even got as far as Annapolis, that the Wrights had taken Mrs. Charles Baker's house at 1312 Twenty-seventh street and would be moving here almost any day.

"It's another Wright—not us," the former Phyllis Thompson told me over the telephone yesterday. She added that when friends in Annapolis reported the news to her, she thought they were joking, but when she came to Washington for a brief stay, she had to deny the rumor all over again.

"No plans for moving at all," she went on. "Sor far as we know now, Annapolis will continue to be our address."

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Capitalites who happened to be at the May- cocktail lounge one day recently are wondering if the Jock ns are in the midst of plans for building a new house. For over two hours, they patiently perused a stack of home-planning zines that they brought along with them . . . Carolyn Nash, who ded her time between London and Paris for several seasons, but spent much of last winter here, is back in town again and expects to stay for some time.

To Be Feted at Luncheon

Harris & Ewing.

Winsome Miss Harriet Jean Hurd, who is wintering in Washington, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given on Saturday by Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. Miss Hurd is a guest of Judge and Mrs. Fossan while she is attending Holton Arms School. She is the daughter of Mrs. Elaine Hurd of Lisbon, Ohio

Tea Will Honor The T. V. Soongs

Widely feted at small, off-the-record parties during their stay thus far in Washington, Dr. and Mrs. T. V. Soong will be honored tomorrow at a large tea to be given by Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward at her home at 2400 Massachusetts avenue.

Dr. Soong, who is completing a government mission for his country, is widely known on many accounts. He is head of the Bank of China and is also a brother of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of China's Generalissimo.

Mrs. Ward and her niece, Miss Florence Ward Cauthen, are just back from New York where they went to purchase the latter's trousseau. Assisting Mrs. Ward tomorrow will be Miss Jan Davis, Miss Cauthen, and another niece, Miss Eula Mae Griff, of Gainesville, Ga., who is attending Holton Arms School.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hatfield, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Zoe Marieta, to Frederick Jackson, of Ocean Grove, N. J. The prospective bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, of Ocean Grove.

Miss Bernardino Entertains For Senora de Brea Messina

A luncheon with a Latin-American flavor was given yesterday by Miss Minerva Bernardino in honor of Senora Flor Trujillo de Brea Messina, wife of the Dominican Minister to Mexico and daughter of Generalissimo Trujillo, "strong man" of the Dominican Republic.

With her husband, Senora de Brea Messina will leave the end of the week for Mexico City. They accompanied Generalissimo Trujillo on his recent trip here and remained a while before making plans to go to Mexico.

Guests at the luncheon, which was given in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower, included Senora de Boyd, wife of the Ambassador of Panama; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Senora de Caceras, wife of the Minister of Honduras; Senora de Baron, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy; Senora de Garland, wife of the Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy; Senora de Vega, wife of the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation; Senorita Carman Baez, Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the First Secretary of the Legation of El Salvador; Senora de Lecuna, wife of the Second Secretary of the Venezuelan Embassy.

Still others there included Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Sylvia Aaron, Senorita Graciela Gueria, Mrs. Lalla Cornish, Senorita Susana Larguia, of Argentina; Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Senora Graciela de Schanke, Mrs. Frederick Benton, Mrs. Fannie Tashof, Mrs. H. Berman, Mrs. Charles McEnerney, Miss Margaret Hart, Miss Betty Hynes, Senorita Guilia McLean and Mrs. Bess McDowell.

Van Zandts Fete Fred Tymms, India Aviation Chief

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Van Zandt have as their guest Fred Tymms, of New Delhi, India, who will be here until the end of the week. The director of Civil Aviation for India, Mr. Tymms is in this country with the British Purchasing Commission. At the conclusion of his stay here, he will go to New York.

Arriving in Washington several days ago, Mr. Tymms was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Van Zandt on Saturday afternoon. Following that, he was feted by his hosts at a small dinner at the Shoreham Hotel.

Kenneth Berrys On Wedding Tour

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Berry, who were married last Saturday in Grace Lutheran Church, will make their home in the Prince George Apartments here on their return from a honeymoon. The bride is the former Miss Patricia Mathews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Newman Mathews, of Chevy Chase, Md., and Mr. Berry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Xen Berry, Chicago.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore ivory faille taffeta trimmed with French chantilly lace and carried white roses and valley lilies. Mrs. R. R. Robertson, the matron of honor, was in blue faille, and Miss Dorothy Mathews, the maid of honor, chose yellow. Both carried baskets of yellow roses and blue delphinium.

The flower girls were Patricia Brown and Mary Lou Gatewood. They were dressed in blue and carried small baskets of rose leaves. H. Dana Monroe was best man and the ushers were George N. Mathews, jr., and Roy R. Robertson. A reception at the Mathews home followed. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Chicago and National Law School.

Kathryn Mowrer, J. A. Latimer, Jr., To Be Married

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Mowrer, of Hagerstown, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Hazelwood, to John Austin Latimer, jr., son of the executive assistant to the Postmaster General and Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, of this city and South Carolina.

The wedding will take place in Hagerstown December 21. The bride-elect attended Mary Baldwin College. Mr. Latimer was graduated from Davidson College in North Carolina.

Cocktail Party Will Be Given By Marcy Morgan

A "queen" is planning a cocktail party. Miss Marcy Morgan, whose fame as Queen of the recent regatta, still lingers on, will be hostess at a farewell fete tomorrow afternoon in honor of Lieut. William Outerson, who will leave soon for England.

The event, very small and informal, is being arranged on the spur of the moment, as Lieut. Outerson has received orders to be off within the next few days. A former White House aide, he is to serve as Assistant Naval Attache at the United States Embassy in London. The party will take place at 2711 Thirty-fourth place, the home of Tom Morgan, father of the hostess.

Mr. Chapman Weds Miss Anne Mangum

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mangum, of Washington and Charleston, S. C., announce the marriage of their daughter, Anne, on Saturday, October 5, to William Chapman, of New Hope, Pa.

The former Miss Mangum was educated in Europe and made her debut last year at the St. Cecilia Ball in Charleston. She is a member of the Junior League. After November 15 Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will make their home in New Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Arlt Will Make Home On Fifteenth Street

Now on a wedding trip to Monhegan, Me., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Arlt will return the latter part of this month and will make their home at 1327 Fifteenth street. Their marriage took place here on Saturday at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating.

The bride is the former Miss MacClaire Mooklar, daughter of Dr. Foushee Mooklar, of Richmond, Va. Mr. Arlt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl T. Arlt, of Alexandria, is a well known Washington artist. A graduate of Colgate University, he later studied at the Phillips Memorial Gallery, where several of his paintings are now in the permanent collection.

For her wedding costume, the former Miss Mooklar chose a mink-trimmed green wool suit with a matching hat, veiled in brown, and a corsage of brown orchids. A graduate of Hollins College, she has been residing in Washington recently.

Following the wedding, there was a reception at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Stanley Surrey, of 2629 Thirty-ninth street.

Gen. Holcombs Receive Marine Officers, Wives

Military Parade Precedes Party At Their Quarters

Between 5 and 7 p. m. yesterday the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb received the Marine officers and their wives living in Washington. A colorful military parade preceded the party at the Holcombs' quarters.

The rooms were filled with fall flowers, intermingled with bright stalks of blue delphinium. Chrysanthemums in pink, white, and deep yellow had been generously used. Saucy button dahlias completed the floral arrangements.

Mrs. Holcomb wore a beautifully draped afternoon gown of vivid royal blue, heightened by a scarlet panel down the center of the skirt and extending to the bodice.

Pouring at the tea table were Mrs. Charles Barrett and Mrs. Charles T. Sanderson. At the coffee table were Mrs. Samuel M. Harrington and Mrs. John Potts. Generally assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Harold E. Rosecrans, Mrs. Louis W. Whaley, Mrs. James Webb, Mrs. John Thomason, Mrs. Emmet Skinner, Mrs. Ralph Mitchell, Mrs. Pedro del Valle and Mrs. Arnold Jacobson.

D. C. Debutante Gives Party

Miss Peggy Lansdowne gathered in a group of her sister debs—and their beaux—to celebrate her eighteenth birthday yesterday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse have planned a luncheon party in honor of Miss Lansdowne on Saturday, November 2. This will follow her debut tea to be held on Friday, November 1, at the Sulgrave Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Caswell will entertain at a buffet supper after the tea for the out-of-town guests and the debutante's assistants. Following the supper the group will return to the Sulgrave Club to attend the first of the Friday evening supper club dances.

Rev. R. L. Gregory To Wed Hilda Hess

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hess, of Puyallup, Wash., announce the engagement of their daughter, Hilda, to the Rev. Randolph L. Gregory, of this city. The betrothal was made known to a number of friends, who gathered Sunday afternoon at the Temple Baptist Church, where the prospective bridegroom has been a pastor for four years.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

ANGUS MALCOLM, of the British Embassy, is now a bachelor father. He has just been joined by his goddaughter, a girl of 6, and her brother, aged 2. As an English nannie came with them, Mr. Malcolm's paternal activities are so far limited to saying tender good-nights and other of the less strenuous duties of parenthood.

DUDLEY HARMON

The children are the son and daughter of a close friend of his in the foreign office. The little girl will study at the Cathedral School.

ANOTHER EMBASSY BACHELOR. John Foster, expects to find himself at any moment the temporary head of a large family. He has invited three youngsters and their mother to join him here next week. They have been in this country for some time, but owing to the complicated financial regulations of the British government, he has had to farm them out to American friends. Mr. Malcolm's have been since July with Mrs. J. C. Rathbourne, of Westbury, Long Island.

THE L. M. C. SMITHS loaned their modern house in Georgetown to Sarah Smith and Dr. Cranshaw Briggs for the reception which followed their wedding on Saturday. The Smiths' living room walls are painted black, a perfect setting for their very fine collection of modern French and American paintings. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith, incidentally, are themselves artists.

Among the guests were several hard workers from the Chicago headquarters of the Republican National Committee. They included the Richard Sangers and Miss Eileen O'Daniel, whose marriage to George Eddy will take place in December. Miss O'Daniel has been going to tiny settlements all over the Middle West to address groups in churches and schoolhouses.

MR. EDDY'S sister, Alice, is still in Paris with Anne Morgan's group. At least her brother thinks she is there—except for one letter in July the family hasn't heard from her. Many of the girl volunteers returned to this country after France fell, but some chose to stick it out and are caring for those in prison camps.

STILL PEACEFULLY pursuing his art studies at the University of Leyden, in spite of the invasion, is William Acker. A brother of Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Mrs. Daniel Partridge—both artists—he was there doing research for the Freer Gallery when war broke out and just stayed on.

MR. AND MRS. Richard Southgate brought a boat back with them when they returned to Washington. A cruiser, it was built this year and is anchored at Annapolis. The Southgates went abroad to live just before war broke out. After a hurried return they lived in New York. Now they are moving back into their house on Kalorama Circle.

BARBARA BOHEN feels so depressed by the war that she has canceled her plans for a debut here. A Smith College student, she is the granddaughter of Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, who has taken an apartment in New York for the winter.

B. P. W. Leader Urges 'Emergency Thinking'

Margaret Hickman, Education Chairman, Addresses Local Club in Inaugurating District Celebration of National Week

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

The American people must open their minds to emergency thinking, Miss Margaret Hickey, of St. Louis, national education chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs, declared last night in addressing the dinner meeting of the local club at the Admiral, inaugurating the District celebration of National Business and Professional Women's Week.

"If this country is to maintain the gains made and to build even a sounder structure for national well-being; if we are to live our personal and business lives unafraid, then we must make a demonstration of responsible, unselfish citizenship," she declared.

Miss Hickey said she believed most American business women had taken their career responsibilities seriously, although there had been a few "vocational butterflies who have flitted in to earn a little pin money before matrimony. But these have been so few they have attracted attention simply because they have been exceptions to the rule."

D. A. R Looks To the Future

The menace to this country of a citizenry apathetic toward its privilege of the ballot was stressed yesterday by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Speaking informally at a luncheon she gave at the Mayflower Hotel for newspaperwomen who have covered D. A. R. activities, and the national officers here for the golden jubilee celebration this week, Mrs. Robert outlined objectives of the society in the immediate future.

Pointing out that it already had a physical plant and a committee setup enabling it to do broad and efficient work, she said it would serve the Nation in the present situation by doing more of the same work it has been carrying on for many years—work most organizations are just beginning to do, she said.

One service will be an effort to get to the polls a record-breaking vote in November—"to show the world our democracy is alive, active and does work," she said.

Another will be continued work among aliens and forming of committees to be stationed in postoffices where they go for registration, assisting them in every way possible, giving citizenship manuals and emphasizing the fact there is no stigma attached to the fingerprinting.

Emphasis also will be put on conservation. Quoting the remark of a British officer's wife now in America who deplored the sight of bread thrown into a garbage pail, Mrs. Robert declared: "We have forgotten what we learned of conservation during the "World War." She is urging the D. A. R. throughout the country to give greater attention to human conservation than before.

Awakened patriotic spirit in the country and renewed appreciation of the D. A. R. has been bringing in applications for membership at the rate of 100 a day during the past month, she said.

The luncheon yesterday was the first event of the golden jubilee week.

Madame Chairman

By SUZANNNE

THE WOMAN'S CLUB of Arlington, at its October meeting yesterday, heard a discussion of welfare work in the county by George Grove, of the Arlington County Community Chest, and a talk on the Red Cross by Mrs. G. A. Collier. Welfare and American citizenship will be the club's major interests this season.

Mrs. James W. Head, the president, presided at the meeting, which followed a luncheon. The session was held in the Arlington Methodist Church and included a flower mart conducted by Mrs. M. B. Payne, the proceeds of which go monthly to the building fund for a clubhouse.

Officers serving with Mrs. Head are: Mrs. Payne, first vice president; Mrs. E. O. Pollock, second vice president; Mrs. G. H. Hieronymus, recording secretary, and Mrs. George Simpson, corresponding secretary.

BIG JOBS—The Washington Chapter of the National Executive Housekeepers' Association has announced its October meeting for next Tuesday night at the apartment of Mrs. Hazel Wood at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The organization, of which Mrs. A. I. Downer, of the Burlington Hotel, is president, was formed here ten years ago by the late Mrs. Margaret Barnes, of the Raleigh Hotel. The Washington organization became the nucleus for the National and there are now chapters in every section of the country. The membership includes women who are executive housekeepers of hotels or hospitals and resident managers of apartment buildings or clubs.

Other local officers beside Mrs. Downer are Mrs. Rita Gibbons, vice president; Mrs. Bess Gatewood, of the Plaza, secretary, and Miss Ella Yaedaker, of the Roger Smith Hotel, treasurer. There are 28 members in the Washington Chapter.

The executive housekeepers are career women who manage the housekeeping end of their buildings. Their effort is to make of the hotel a home away from home. They take particular interest in resident guests who no longer have homes of their own, says Mrs. Downer, giving them the personal attentions that meet their individual needs.

The housekeepers supervise all help—the maids, house boys and cleaning men—arrange public rooms for special outside activities and cooperate with the hotel managers in all details having to do with the comfort of the guests.

Mrs. Downer has a diploma in interior decoration, as have several others. They supervise the furnishing of the rooms, putting in feminine touches for the women guests and masculine for the men. It is their responsibility to check on the linens and supplies of all kinds, to see that windows are closed in stormy weather, that electric fans are available in warm weather and that maids in charge of resident guests feel concern for the comfort to each guest. In other words they make the wheels go 'round smoothly from behind the scenes.

Nation Needs Christian Aid, Lutherans Told

Service to Country Urged by Omaha Convention Speaker

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 7.—Dr. O. Garfield Beckstrand, associate pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church at Rockford, Ill., told members of the United Lutheran Church in America Brotherhood tonight that the "destiny of our Nation is at stake" because "of the want of consecrated Christian men in high office."

Dr. Beckstrand urged members attending the twelfth biennial convention as "laymen of the greatest Protestant church in the world" to "take it as part of your Christian duty to consider doing some specific service for your country, and to throw the might of your Christian faith and character into the political life of your locality."

He appealed for discipline to accomplish tasks that may "draw us from our comfortable home, our pleasure and our smug complacency."

Earlier the brotherhood went on record against proposed merger of all periodicals in the United Lutheran Church.

The United Church is expected to act Thursday on a plan to combine the monthly organs of all the auxiliaries Editor of Lutheran Men, brotherhood publication, is Dr. Amos J. Traver, of Frederick, Md.

About 300 delegates and visitors to the twelfth biennial sessions heard Treasurer Harry A. Fritsch, of Allentown, Pa., report that "for the first time in 22 years we have reached a balanced budget." Receipts for the two-year period were nearly $25,000," he said.

Speaker Calls Job Printing 'Sick Industry'

Typothetae Official Urges Cooperation In Radio Challenge

Representatives of the Nation's job printing business were warned yesterday that too much competition among job printers might mean the death of the industry.

Speaking to the fifty-fourth, annual convention of United Typothetae of America at the Mayflower Hotel, Walter B. Reilly, vice president of the association, pointed out that the U. T. A. cannot be a price-fixing agency because of the Anti-trust Act, but he added:

"Gentlemen, a man does not crucify his friends. So, get to know your competitors."

Reilly stated that the competition of radio as a medium of communication has made job printing a "sick industry."

He urged printers to cooperate with one another so that they could compete with radio in advertising. "Huge sums of money are currently being spent upon radio programs, sums which aggregated $104,675,000 in 1939," Reilly said. "And the end is not yet, with television just peeping up over the horizon."

John Davis, jr., of Judd & Detweiler, Inc., of Washington, was chosen a member of the board of directors of the Young Executives of the Graphic Arts, a junior branch of the Typothetae. Don Reeves, of Baltimore, Md., was chosen president.

Other speakers at yesterday's convention sessions included Otis H. Johnson, president of the Graphic Arts Association of Washington, and John A. Bresnahan, of Washington, general counsel to the Typothetae.

Holbrook Dairy Suit Over D. C. Milk Pact Begins

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Court, yesterday began hearing the suit of Holbrook Farms Dairy, Brentwood, Md., to enjoin enforcement of the Washington Milk Marketing Agreement.

The dairy claims the Secretary of Agriculture lacks authority to regulate its prices and other business because it operates in Maryland and is not engaged in interstate commerce. It has been immune to the agreement all summer, under an injunction granted by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat.

Justice O'Donoghue rejected the Government's contention that the only competent evidence was that previously offered the Secretary of Agriculture.

South was declarer at six spades and West led the king of clubs; Sally won and returned a low club, which East took with his jack. He played a diamond back; West put up the ten, and dummy's ace won.

Mrs. Young now decided that West held five diamonds and five clubs; it certainly looked that way, for East would not play a diamond into the board's ace, king, nine, if he had held another club. This placed West with five diamonds for his overcall, and five clubs from indications of the play to the first trick.

If West had remaining one heart and two spades, it would not do at all for Mrs. Young to try to ruff the heart suit, as West would get a trump in first.

She therefore resolved upon a squeeze for the twelfth trick. She played two rounds of trumps, the king, ace of hearts and ruffed a low heart with dummy's spade nine. She trumped a club and ran out her remaining spades. On the last lead West was squeezed between diamonds and clubs. He could not retain both diamond honors and the club queen. A discard from either suit would allow Mrs. Young to win the last two tricks—either the king-nine of diamonds or the king of diamonds and the nine of clubs. She lost only one club trick.

U. S. Defense Must Be Total, President Says

Standard of Living Must Not Be Lowered, Distributors Told

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 7.—President Roosevelt told a meeting of distributors today that "under modern conditions effective defense must be total defense, and total defense comprises not only the military and naval factors, but the industrial, the agricultural and the standard of living factors as well."

The President's message, and messages from W. L. MacKenzie King, prime minister of Canada; Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, were read to the twelfth Boston conference on distribution, a two-day session bringing together many of the Nation's leading business men and economists.

Sir Louis Beale, member of the British purchasing commission, declared Britain was far stronger in men and materials than a year ago, and expressed belief that "inexhaustible resources . . . supported by the machine industry of the United States, insures us in the end an overwhelming mass of power."

Asserting that Britain had a two-fold aim of enduring and repelling attacks upon the heart of the empire while preparing and delivering blows against the enemy "which will ultimately take the war into his territory," Beale said that "to a great extent, this war will be won by the products of the mines and factories of a thousand cities, and towns."

Harvey Firestone, jr., vice president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Akron Ohio, reported that steps have been taken to build up a reserve supply of rubber sufficient to give this country a full year's protection, and added that it was "entirely practicable to make synthetic rubber tires on a commercial scale in case of an emergency."

Harold H. Swift, vice chairman of the board of Swift & Co., urged that industry drop the practice of treating employes as a "class, gang or group," and "to treat them as individuals."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King noted that Canada and Great Britain were represented by speakers at the conference, and added:

"It cannot be too often emphasized that the discussion of common problems and the reaffirmation of common ideals between the English-speaking peoples will inevitably stimulate the present hope and assure the ultimate realization of sanity, decency and good faith in the relations between man and man and nation and nation."

Secretary Hull said that in order to overcome present abnormal world conditions it was "essential for the American nations to consult and cooperate with each other to the end that the maximum of constructive action may be undertaken for the common good of all."

Jones declared that "as the tempo of the Nation's defense program quickens, the burden on our system of distribution will increase immeasurably."

President Roosevelt's message said:

"It is to be emphasized that the new responsibilities which the defense program places upon the distributors of America are additional to those of ordinary times, and do not replace . . .

"Our industrial processes must be even more efficient than before. The raw materials and foodstuffs which sustain the Nation and its workshops, must be available in the right places and at the right times, and the American standard of living—that primary weapon of our defense—must not be lowered through our failure to do the job which total defense imposes . . ."

the cockpit, but the window was too close to the ground and he couldn't get the flier out.

Heat Foils Rescuer

"I tried pulling him out through the bars at the side, but the bars were too close together," Olsen told the Associated Press reporter.

"The man tried to help me, but we just couldn't do it. Finally, the heat got so intense, I had to abandon him to his fate."

The other witness, Watson, said that "the flames were so fierce" that the rescuer had to let go" to keep from being roasted himself."

Shortly after Olsen was forced back by the heat, the wreckage exploded, with flames shooting 50 feet into the air.

The two fliers were attached to the Eighty-eighth Army Air Corps reconnaissance unit stationed at Salt Lake City.

Friends of the family here said that Lieut. Mather and his mother, Mrs. James E. Mather, had left Washington last year following his graduation from West Point. He first went to California for flight training, and later to Kelley Field, Tex., his mother accompanying him, the friends said.

A graduate of Western High School, Lieut. Mather also attended Devitt and Millard preparatory schools here. At West Point he was a first-string tackle on the football team, won numerals in boxing and wrestling, and a monogram in track. He was a member of the Cadet Choir and the Hundredth Night Show. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Cavalry detailed to the Air Corps.

Lieut. Mather's brother, also a West Point graduate, is an instructor there. His father, who died several years ago, was an attorney with the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Scientist, 70, Says He Tried To Revive Woman 7 Years

By the Associated Press

Key West, Fla., Oct 7.—An aged, unemployed X-ray technician related to police today that he was driven by hopeless love to keep the corpse of a young woman in his bedroom for seven years while trying to restore her to life.

The man, Karl Tanzler Van Cesel, 70, was charged with removing a body from its grave without permission.

He was arrested yesterday at his home—part of a dirty, ramshackle warehouse—where the life-like body, reconstructed and preserved in wax, lay in a bed.

"I did not want one so beautiful to go to dust," Van Cosel told Deputy Sheriff Ray Elwood. "I tried many experiments to restore her to life." "I still hope if I live long enough to bring her back."

When he first removed the body from its crypt more than seven years ago, Van Cosel said he slipped it secretly into the Key West Marine Hospital, where he had been employed as an X-ray technician, and kept it there a week while he treated it with chemicals.

Then, hiding the corpse in an old airplane he had purchased, he had it carted to his makeshift home on the outskirts of the community.

Police reopened the crypt in which the young women had been buried and found it empty.

The prisoner, a graduate of Liepzig, said he hoped to keep the outer tissue of the body sculptured to its original likeness with beeswax and reactivate the inner cells through X-ray treatments.

10,000 Truckers In N. Y. Strike

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Ten thousand New York City truck drivers were called out on strike tonight after Mayor LaGuardia failed to get employers to grant union demands for a week's vacation with pay.

The walkout, effective tomorrow, was ordered by William S. Devery, president of Local 807, International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs (A. F. of L.). Union officials said that the movement of perishable foodstuffs, newsprint and products necessary in carrying out the national defense program would not be affected.

Text of Willkie's Address in Newark, Saying Roosevelt Is Backed by 'Petty Hitlers'

Candidate Likens Political Machines To the Nazi Party

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Oct. 7.—The text of the address by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, in Newark's City Stadium tonight follows:

I greatly appreciate the reception you have given me tonight. But I do not take it as a personal tribute. I take it as a tribute to the fundamental principle at stake in this campaign: The principle that our Government—city, State, and Federal—belongs not to a few persons but to all of the people.

You know and I know that America will be safe, so long as it is governed by a real count of the real votes of real people.

In the last few months I have seen and talked with millions of Americans. I realize that the Republican Party is ahead of a trend.

This trend is an awakening of the people to a sense of their own power. The people of America are saying: 'We don't want anybody to govern us. We want to govern ourselves. We want for ourselves the power (and the majesty) of self-government.'

The Republican Party is dedicated to that principle. It wants free votes. Those are the only votes it wants.

Americans by Choice

On that basis, we are going to sweep this country in November.

The principle of self-government is the only asset America started with. We moved on from there. My grandparents, your grandparents, your parents, and many of you yourselves, came here to find that asset. They became Americans by choice because they knew that if they were given a share in government, there would be a better chance for them, and for their children.

That chance still exists. It is still better than any other chance in the world. And the Republican Party insists that every man and woman in America must have it.

Today, in most of the great nations, the right of self-government has been lost. Men, individual men in control of political machines, have taken that right away from the people.

Adolf Hitler is such a man. He is not just a man alone, but a man in control of a political machine. He is the head of a party called the Nazi Party. That party reaches down to every district, every block, every house in Germany.

That party, that total political machine, is in absolute control of Germany. You can't make a speech without its permission. You can't vote except the way it tells you. You can't question whether that party is right or wrong.

Excuse Sounds Familiar

Recently your New Jersey Legislature tried to install some voting machines in Hudson County. What would happen in Germany if someone tried to do that? Why, the Nazi Party would prevent it. To keep you people happy it might give some sort of excuse. It might say that voting machines were too expensive.

I think that excuse sounds familiar to you here in New Jersey.

And what has happened to labor in Germany? Why, labor has lost its rights. It cannot bargain. It cannot strike. It has no protection against long hours of work. There is no floor under the pay checks. The German workman cannot even choose his own job. He cannot even choose the town that he wants to work in.

The rights of labor are bound to suffer whenever a political machine gets control of government. It is only when the people can speak that labor is safe. Because labor is the people—and the people are labor.

Those personages in Germany who correspond to labor leaders here, or to labor delegates, or to business agents, do not represent labor. They obey the party, the political machine. They do not take orders from the workers. They take orders from the political boss.

And I think that some of that also sounds familiar to you people in New Jersey.

Very Same Errors

Believe me, these principles are no different on this side of the Atlantic than on the other side. If we commit the same errors here we shall get similar results.

Don't fool yourselves. We are committing those very same errors. Right here in the midst of our free country we have political machines just like the Nazi Party. They are operated by little Hitlers.

This morning I toured through Hudson County, one of the most populous in the United States. This county has been dominated for more than 20 years by a political machine and a political boss. Jersey City, the center of Hudson County, has the highest rate of any city above 100,000—a rate of $53.13 per $1,000 on swollen assessments.

And I was shocked to see the vacant buildings, the houses boarded up, the empty lots. They are evidence of what happens when the people lose the power to govern.

And what else? In Jersey City honest men and women have been beaten and dragged to the ferries and told to leave the city. This has happened to labor leaders. Norman Thomas, the present Socialist candidate for President, was denied the right to make a speech.

I am not in agreement with Mr. Thomas. But I would defend his right to speak as I would defend my own.

I will do the same for every man.

And I will go down the line for the right of every man to cast his own vote—for me, or against me.

But where is that right, today, in Hudson County? You know as well as I that the votes of honest citizens do not count in that part of America. The ballot boxes in that county are stuffed with illegal votes obtained from fraudulent registration lists—votes made out of thin air. The political machine uses them to keep itself in power.

You remember the election of 1937 here in New Jersey. Following that election a legislative investigating committee sought access to the poll books in Hudson County. They were refused. The books were locked in steel vaults. They were guarded. For three years nobody could get at them.

Then a few weeks ago the Legislature of New Jersey passed a law ordering those books turned over to the superintendent of elections. This law was part of the program of a Republican Legislature to provide for an honest election.

What was the answer given by this political machine to the people's Legislature?

Why, the books had been burned.

Why had they been burned? To protect what? To save whom?

Let us speak the words out loud. Those books were destroyed to cover up a crime against the people of New Jersey.

They were destroyed to protect corruption in the very heart of our democracy.

Liberal Movement

They were destroyed to protect a political machine and a political boss who has taken away from the honest people of Hudson County the right—the democratic right—of self-government.

And who is this man whose political machine corrupts democracy in Jersey City?

Who is this man who says who shall speak and who shall not speak in this particular part of America?

Who is this man who has said of Jersey City, "I am the law?"

Why, I'll tell you who it is. It's the vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee!

This is the vice chairman—the vice chairman—of the party of the New Deal. Yes, his name is Frank Hague.

I could wish at this moment that I were not speaking to you as a candidate in this election year. If I were not a candidate I could describe without self-interest the tragedy that has befallen one of our great political parties.

I know that there are many here—and I was one of them—who looked forward with great hope to the liberal movement that swept over this Nation in 1932. It is a tragedy that the leader of this movement—the present third-term candidate—should now have among his closest lieutenants a man whose machine had to burn the voting records of the people in order to hide crimes.

By what right can that party—that third-term party—any longer call itself the party of reform? Here you have as its vice chairman a man who has violated the sacred right of the ballot—and violated the American civil liberties to boot. What claim has the candidate of that party to either liberalism or reform?

Frank Hague isn't the only leader of this new liberalism. Across the river there is the boss of the Bronx. And out in Chicago there is the commissioner of sewers. These are the pillars of the New Deal democracy.

We have eye-witness reports. We have photographers of New Dealers, who have been governing us for nearly eight years, seated in conference with these bosses at the Chicago convention to nominate their third-term candidate.

I ask this question: What deal has the New Deal made with these men? What are they going to deal out to the voters, if elected?

The voice of the sewers isn't in it for love. Neither is the mayor of Jersey City. These are practical men. They are rich men. Before they act they want to know what they are going to get.

You and I know what kind of deals are made between machine politicians and office-holders. We know that those deals will not work out to the benefit of us, the people.

But the New Deal party thinks that these men can deliver the votes of the great States of New York, Illinois, and New Jersey. They are so confident of the power of these machines that they don't even make an argument. They don't even discuss the issues in this campaign. Their candidate pretends not to know whether his speeches are political or not.

Petty Hitlers Here

Is anyone here so gullible as to think that the third-term candidate is paying no attention to politics?

Is anyone here so charitable as to think, in the light of the record, that those inspection trips, those dramatic gestures, those suddenly created emergencies, are all non-political?

Remember tonight, as we sit here, the world is aflame. Democracy has been crushed upon the continent of Europe. The men and women and children of Britain are defending democracy with their lives.

The head of the New Deal party represents us among those nations. The head of the New Deal party has had some things to say, recently about the attitude of Hitler and Mussolini toward our elections in America. Not only has he pushed America close to the wars of Europe and Asia. He now seeks to drag the wars of Europe and Asia into American politics.

He tells us that he, and he alone, represents democracy.

But I say—that he cannot represent the democracy that I stand for while he seeks to perpetuate his power through petty Hitlers right here in our own land!

That is not democracy as the American people know it. That is not the kind of democracy which the Republican Party is fighting for.

That is democracy already on the way to dictatorship.

This is the issue that we Republicans have with the New Deal. The New Deal relies on political bosses. The Republican Party relies on the people.

We are ranged in battle against threatening forces. We are fighting against the forces of Federal spending, Federal patronage, corrupt city machines, and smear propaganda.

But we are not afraid of these things because we have faith in the American people.

Fight Against Corruption

Here in New Jersey we have nominated men who will fight for the people with everything they have to give. Get behind your candidate for the Senate, W. Warren Barbour. Get behind your candidate for Governor, Senator Robert C. Hendrickson. These men stand for more than good government. They stand for your power, the power of the people.

You cannot win this fight against ballot corruption by supporting the candidates sponsored by Hague. If he regarded them as a threat he would not be supporting them.

The Republican Party is not afraid of the ballot. Our party is urging all of you to register so that you may vote.

This year at Philadelphia we held a free convention. We now want to hear from the American people in a free election.

I made no deals at that convention. And neither I nor the party will enter into any deals.

We say, come out and vote as free men. Vote against us if you will, but vote the way you want, and not the way some boss tells you to vote.

There are millions of us who stand for the free ballot—Republicans, Democrats and Independents. Our numbers are growing. We are awake to the greatness of the cause that we are fighting for.

This year we shall seize and hold the right of self-government. We say with Abraham Lincoln that this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom. It shall not surrender to ambitious men the precious rights of men who live in it. This is our country—the people's country. We love it. We want it. And we intend to keep it for ourselves.

Text of Address In Jersey City

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 7.—The following is the text of a talk delivered by Wendell Willkie at Journal Square, Jersey City, today:

Mr. Chairman and People of Jersey City:

After I came across the ferry into New Jersey this this morning, one of the things that struck me as I was driven up the streets of Hoboken was the fact that every store window had pictures of my opponent and his associates on the New Deal ticket pasted in it. I don't know of any more appropriate place to put those pictures. I never saw a more perfect symbol of the real purpose and the real accomplishments of this Administration than that they should have their pictures in empty stores.

I read with a great deal of interest that the man who says "I am the law" in Jersey City announced in the public press that I would get police protection in Jersey City and that I should be treated with courtesy. There is an interesting philosophy expressed in that remark, if you will just think about it.

Here I am, irrespective of any personal merit, a candidate of one of the two major parties for President of the United States, representing millions and millions of voters and advocating the cause of those millions, yet the mayor here, the law of this city and one of the true representatives of the opposition—vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, principal promoter of the third-term draft, if such it be—has so lost his sense of balance, of the realities and purposes of American life that he says, as the ruler of this city, I shall get police protection.

Forgotten Principles

Is he the determiner of whether the people of New Jersey and of Hudson County will treat a man representing such a cause as I do as courteously as one representing the New Deal? How did this fellow get that way? He must have forgotten all about American principles.

Why shouldn't I come into Jersey City, and why shouldn't people listen to me courteously but for two reasons? They are that for seven and a half years we have had preached to our people the doctrine of bitterness from the very highest of places; and, secondly, men like this "puny Hitler" here have attempted to dominate and control our political life and say who shall and who shall not speak, and who shall and who shall not be received courteously in the great State of New Jersey. Such actions disclose subconsciously what they really think and what they really stand for.

Here is an administration that has been going about proclaiming itself as the friend of the common pepole, as the friend of morality in American public life, as representing a so-called New Deal. Yet it perpetuates itself in power, or seeks to perpetuate itself in power with a combination of the greatest bunch of corruptionists and racketters that ever existed in America.

Frank Hague on the ship of state, helping to pilot it! Why, there won't be anything left on the ship of state when he gets through.

Frank Hague, drafter of the President and the determiner of national policy and the administration of law in this country!

No Abstract Principle

Now, I want to make a very earnest appeal to you people here in Jersey City. You know, the most precious thing in all America is our civil liberties. Whenever civil liberties begin to disappear, then dictatorship and autocracy begin to take the place of democracy. That has been true in every country in Europe. Whenever we begin to abridge the rights of each man to worship God as he pleases, or to express himself as he will, or whenever we infringe upon the right of public discussion, or we bar any of our citizenry from aspiring to the highest public position because of any prejudice, or because of their race, religion, creed or color, then we start down the road to dictatorship.

I want to urge upon you people of Jersey City that you cannot be for civil liberties occasionally, you cannot adopt civil liberties as an abstract principle, and have the right of civil liberties remain strong in this country. Every man in every precinct, every town, every city, every township and every county in the United States must fight vigilantly for the preservation of civil liberties in his own individual community in order to assure their strength in the entire country.

Here you live in a great city where, under the rule, as I say, of this puny Hitler the tax rate has risen to the highest of any major city in the United States. Meanwhile, this fellow sits and says that this man shall come to speak and that man shall not; that this person shall be treated courteously and the other one discourteously, and that this one shall get police protection and this one shall not.

I call upon you in the interest of the cause that we represent to bring civil liberties to their full functioning in Jersey City. If we do that, and the people do that in every community in the country, those great, precious rights will remain. But if we clip them off piece by piece in the different communities, they will die nationally.

Cause of Republican Party

I expect to speak tonight over the radio. I am going to talk from time to time over the radio. I want you to listen to what I have to say and I want you to read what I have to say in the newspapers. Likewise I want you to listen to and read what the opposition says. Then, as thoughtful Americans and prayerful Americans in the most important election that Americans have ever engaged in, go to the polls and cast your votes.

I come representing the cause of the Republican Party in this campaign of 1940. The Republican Party offers you a program of starting the wheels of American industry and business going, so that men can get back to jobs instead of staying on relief. It promises, however, that, until they are provided with jobs, relief will be provided for them.

The Republican Party offers to you in place of the present incompetence, complete incompetence, in the building of a national defense program, a competent, vigorous building of defense so that no dictators, no matter how strong, may seek to strike us.

The Republican Party offers to you a program of national unity, where class distinctions and bitternesses and hatreds will disappear from American life and all of us will join together in preserving this precious democracy of ours.

To Clean Up State

Now, no man can accomplish those things alone, and I want to speak as vigorously and as firmly and as earnestly as I know how in behalf of the reelection of Senator Barbour to the United State Senate, where he has served so ably.

And I urge upon you the sending of Mr. Cuddy to Congress from this district.

And then, in order to clean up this State, to bring civil liberties back to it, and to end corruption and boss control, I pray with you to elect my very dear friend, Bob Hendrickson, to the governorship.

I call upon all of you New Jersey people. You all love this country; you love it much more than you love any political boss; you love it much more than any corruption; you love it much more than any control of your citizenry, because, after all, democracy has been passing out everywhere in this world. This is the last untouched great democracy in all this world. We cannot continue to go down the road of bankruptcy, of economic depression and disunity. We must save the country. I call upon you as missionaries in the cause of saving America.

Thank you very much.

Manor Park Unit Opposes Zone Change

Six Citizens' Groups Meet and Discuss Underpass, Schools And Other Matters

Community matters dominated discussion last night at meetings of six citizens associations, Washington's nearest approach to self-government.

Zoning regulations, taxation, the proposed Scott Circle underpass, the need for new schools—these and other matters of civic import produced resolutions from the local bodies to various District and Federal agencies.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association went on record in opposition to proposed changes in the zoning regulations which alter the definition of a single family to include any group of people serving under a single head. The meeting was held at the Whittier School, Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

A resolution was adopted requesting information on all nontaxable land in the District which is being put to profitable use. It was requested in a resolution that witnesses in criminal cases in police court be compensated for the time spent in testifying in nonjury cases.

After a heated discussion the association refused to join the newly formed North Washington Council of Citizens Association which is working as a unit under the Federation of Citizens Assocations.

Progressive of Georgetown

Appropriation of funds for the maintenance of the District Testing Station was urged at a meeting of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

The association also voted opposition to the existing police regulations under which stolen property is repurchased from pawnbrokers by the original owners.

Meeting at the Peabody School, the group heard William Caesar advocate the purchase of an automobile for police use in traffic accidents, and adopted a resolution favoring reduction of assessments on property owners along Wisconsin avenue, which is soon to be widened.

Officers elected were Etta Taggart, honorary president; Mrs. Harry Leroy Jones, president; Mrs. Joseph Goodman, first vice president; George Howe, second vice president; Richard Harness, third vice president; Miss Ann R. Kelliher, recording secretary; Miss Nora Lee Orndorff, corresponding secretary, and Miss Edna Ladson, treasurer.

Dupont Circle

Members of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association adopted a committee report favoring construction of the proposed Scott Circle underpass under Massachusetts avenue.

The report, written by Dr. F. Scott Avery, asserted that the underpass running north and south on Sixteenth street, rather than east and west on Massachusetts avenue, would mean shorter ramps and fewer cut trees.

of the Metropolitan Police Department of the Metropolitan Police Department's new accident prevention squad, discussed the 578 accidents occurring in the District during the last two weeks.

Causes of the accidents as revealed by Inspector Miller are reported in a story by Howard Wentworth on Page 5.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association elected Vincent B. Boudren, real estate broker and banker, as president and resolved to seek erection of a new elementary school for the area which it serves.

In addition to Boudren, who succeeds Norman E. Phillips, the organization elected Barton Margerum, vice president; Mrs. Marie Higdon, secretary, and Mrs. Joseph E. Montgomery, treasurer.

The new president was directed to appoint a committee to confer with the Board of Education on the association's proposal to build a school on District-owned property at Third and Evarts streets northeast.

It was pointed out that children in the association's area now must cross an arterial highway to attend Crosby Noyes School or Emory School, both of which are at least a mile from most of their homes.

Forest Hills

Disapproval of the flag salute used by District school children because it resembles the Nazi salute, and an attempt to have it replaced with the type of salute used by service men, were voted by the Forest Hills Citizens Association.

A letter to that effect will be sent to the board of education and a copy to the American Flag Association.

Sponsorship of a junior auxiliary, motor transport corps, for boys and girls 16 to 21 years of age also was voted.

The movement, which has been spreading in New England, encourages safe driving, builds a nucelus for defense purposes and makes young people "defense-conscious," it was explained at the meeting.

Takoma Park, D. C.

The Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., last night rejected a proposal that it become affiliated with the North Washington Council of Citizens Associations. At the same time it held up for further consideration the joining of the North Washington Community Council, an organization of Parent-Teacher groups and other civic agencies in that area.

L. F. Casey, chairman of the committee on schools, was authorized to confer with school officials on a request for a Takoma Elementary School addition to replace older parts now in use.

F. J. DeMoll was elected to succeed R. M. Graham as delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Graham presented his resignation last night.

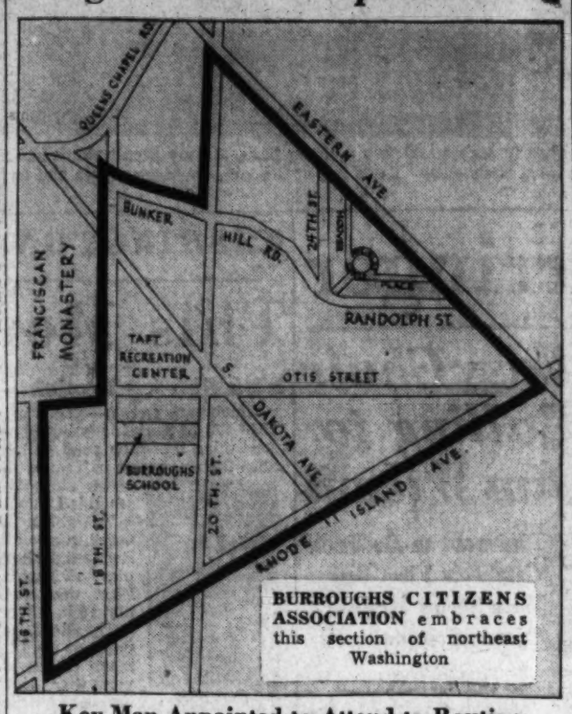
Burroughs Association Tries 'Neighborliness' Experiment



Key Man Appointed to Attend to Routine Affairs So That Regular Meetings May Be Devoted to Variety Entertainment

This is the eighth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

An experiment with a new "philosophy of neighborliness" is being tried this fall by members of the fast-growing Burroughs Citizens Association.

It consists essentially of an organization of "key men" from each block of the Burroughs area, who will hold monthly business meetings aside from the association's regular sessions. Thus instead of devoting most of the association's time to routine matters of the community, the organization is free to feature entertainment and variety in its meetings.

As the Burrough's president, Dr. A. Fife Heath, explained it yesterday, the purpose of the dual set-up is "to create a new philosophy of neighborliness essential to building a strong association that will be united in all actions to preserve the high standards of our community."

Complaints and suggestions for neighborhood improvements will be received by the body's representatives in each block and taken up with the lieutenant key men at meetings to be held the second Friday of each month. Matters of major importance will be referred to the whole unit in brief business meetings preceeding the regular monthly entertainment program.

Organized in 1929, the association now has 400 paid up members and expects to double the figure during the current season. Its two major accomplishments to date, according to the president, have been in helping to obtain the Taft Recreation Center, at Otis and Twentieth streets northeast, and the Taft Junior High School.

High on the list of projects for the coming year are a branch library for the neighborhood and a gymnasium wing for the Taft Junior High.

Name of the organization, which together with the Rhode Island avenue association, serves the Woodridge section of Washington, was derived from the John Burroughs School, at Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast. Members meet there on the fourth Friday of each month, as they have for the past 11 years.

Burroughs was one of the first citizens' organizations to advocate a new National Guard Armory for the District, according to Dr. Heath.

Officers of the association include Dr. Heath, president; Frank E. Harrison, first vice president; Mrs. Robert F. Snow, second vice president; Mrs. James Gouge, secretary; Louis F. Kreek, treasurer, and Kenneth P. Armstrong financial secretary. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association are Phillip U. Gayant and Wilbur S. Finch.

MARKING TIME AT CONCERT—Lydia Farquhar and Grace Powell, both of Alexandria, Va., get instructions from Maestro Walter Bauer, director, before last night's symphony concert by the Department of Agriculture Orchestra. The young women were soloists on the program

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Monday night in South Building auditorium. Soloists: Grace Powell, violin; Lydia Farquhar, viola. Programs: Overture to "Gli Orazii e Curiazii" (Cimarosa), Symphonie Concertante in E flat (Mozart), "Nuages" (Debussy), "Sharazad" (Rimski-Korsahov), "Natchez-on-the-Hill" (Powell).

First of the instrumental organizations to appear since October 1 traditionally opened the musical season, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra played last evening under the direction of Walter Bauer and was cordially received by a large audience in South Building Auditorium. This zealous group of voluntary music-makers did not disband for the summer, but continued rehearsals and gave two concerts during the period of torrid humidity. None the worse for that unabated labor, they entered upon their new season with the usual enthusiasm and obvious devotion to their pursuit of artistic pleasure.

BROWN

Such individual honors as the occasion afforded were neatly won by Grace Powell and Lydia Farquhar with their sedulous performance in Mozart's Symphonie Concertante for violin, viola and orchestra. The two young Alexandrians had patently spent much private practice on the solo parts, for their readings were excellently phrased and projected with emotional verve. Their playing had the distinction of technical finish and artistic sincerity.

Dr. Bauer, true to his habit of unearthing unusual items for his musicians to study, opened the program with a novelty 146 years old—the overture to Domenico Cimarosa's seriotus opera, "Gli Orazii e Curiazii," also known as "The Three Brothers." Of the 76 operas, comic and tragic, which made Cimarosa one of the most popular composers of the late eighteenth century in Naples, Rome, Vienna and St. Petersburg, only "The Secret Marriage" has survived for occasional performances today.

This neglect is unjust, for Cimarosa's music was an immediate forerunner of Mozart's and has some of the same endearing traits. His orchestral scoring was thin, but he had a delightful vein of melody, a concise and witty style, a contagious humor and a masterly control of instrumental resources. It was he who enriched operatic procedure by introducing vocal trios and quartets into the dramatic action.

The second half of the program consisted of Rimski - Korsakov's "Sharazad" suite with its familiar tone-pictures of marvels from "The Arabian Nights" and the three Virginia country dances which John Powell orchestrated effectively in "Natchez-on-the-Hill." The inclusion of Mr. Powell's lively and engaging suite in the concert had the complimentary significance that the composer is a cousin of Grace Powell.

A.F.L. Group Hits Merit Bill Change

Nichols Amendment Excluding D. C. Area Citizens From Its Benefits Is Attacked

Central Labor Union, council of District American Federation of Labor affiliates, last night expressed opposition to the Nichols amendment in the Ramspeck bill excluding residents of Washington, Maryland and Virginia from its benefits.

The bill, which would place 200,000 additional Federal employes under civil service, only yesterday was sent back to conference after the House insisted that the Senate accept the Nichols amendment which would refuse civil service status to employes from over-quota States.

The local A. F. L. council voiced sentiment favoring the bill should it be passed without the restriction.

Opposes Photographs

At the same time, the Industrial Union Council, central body for District Congress of Industrial Organizations units, approved a Ramspeck bill amendment which would prohibit the Civil Service Commission from requiring applicants to submit photographs, as a curb against possible racial discrimination.

The Industrial Union Council has already gone on record favoring the Ramspeck bill, but without the Nichols' qualifying clause.

The Central Labor Union nominated Frank J. Coleman, its secretary, delegate to the A. F. of L. convention in New Orleans November 18, and then instructed the delegate to seek a convention resolution supporting the Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest site for the new Abbot Vocational School.

Dispute Over Site

Under controversial discussion for several years because of difference among civic leaders as to a site, an appropriation for the school was cut out by Congressional conferees last June when House and Senate chose different locations. The former approved Thirteenth and Upshur; the latter, Brentwood Park, in Northeast Washington.

The Industrial Union Council revealed it had received an offer by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, senior minority member of the Senate District Committee, to introduce a bill to insure fair and reasonable rent rates in the city. The I. U. C. housing committee has been investigating rent control proposals.

The Attorney General and the Defense Commission were urged to withhold contracts from industrial concerns which failed to comply with Federal labor laws. The I. U. C. resolution would make the action retroactive to contracts now held.

Lip-Reading Class For Men to Open

Men's lips are said to be more difficult to read than women's—but the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing proposes to do something about it. Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock the society will organize free lip-reading classes conducted solely by and for men.

The first class will be held at the headquarters, 2431 Fourteenth street northwest, with Paul Pernecky conducting. "It is not generally know that men's lips are more difficult to read than women's, but the recent hearing test at the New York World's Fair proved that men hear men's voices better, and women hear women's voices better; but that both men and women understand women better through lip reading," an announcement from the society said.

Old James Creek Canal, 'Stream of Pestilence,' Uncovered Briefly for New Streetcar Project

WORKMEN ON CONCRETE TOP OF JAMES CREEK CANAL. ARCH OF PRESENT STORM SEWER IS SHOWN

The old James Creek Canal, infamous "stream of pestilence" which once ran through southwest Washington and was reputedly the cause of more than 300 deaths, was uncover yesterday for the first time in a generation by street railway workmen.

Running from the foot of Capitol Hill to the Anacostia River, the canal was built in 1876 and caused an average of one death a month by drowning until it was converted into a storm sewer and covered by Canal street early in this century.

Several sewers in the southwest area emptied into the stone-walled ditch, adding a foul odor to the deadly canal. A newspaper report in 1902 stated that "the air in the vicinity of the canal for the distance of three blocks is contaminated with terrible smells."

Early District Commissioners were perturbed by the "menace to life and health created by the same putrid canal," according to contemporary news clippings. They "repeatedly" brought the mattter before Congress, the news stories said, apparently with no effect.

Workmen who have uncovered one arch of the present storm sewer at Second and Canal streets northwest, are lowering its roof to make way for a streetcar route through that intersection. They found the top of the old canal in good repair. One engineer reported that it evidently had been built of "natural cement" imported from Europe."

Woman Hurt, 2 Others Held In Auto Crash

District Policeman's Wife Knocked Down At Bethesda Corner

One woman was injured and two others were charged with reckless driving yesterday as the result of an automobile accident at Wisconsin avenue and Stanford street in Bethesda, Md.

Police reported that Mrs. Margaret M. Norris, of 3320 Reservoir road northwest, the wife of a District policeman, was knocked down by a car driven by Mrs. Loretta Fleischman, of Rochester, N. Y.

A car driven by Mrs. Cecilia Droney, of 1820 Newton street northwest, crashed into the back of Mrs. Fleischman's car when the latter skidded to a sudden stop in an attempt to avoid Mrs. Norris, it was reported. Mrs. Fleischman and Mrs. Droney were charged with reckless driving by Bethesda police.

George Washington, 76, of 1338 R street northwest, suffered severe cerebral concussions yesterday when struck by a truck at Ninth and V streets northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Six soldiers stationed at Bolling Field received minor injuries when their automobile struck a pole at Wisconsin avenue and Ordway streets northwest. Treated at Walter Reed and Emergency hospitals were Joseph Fusco, 21; Louis Yasenchak, 20; Joseph Williams, 21; Emil Mihales, 23; Raymond Hoag, 18, and John McLain, 20. The car, said to have been driven by Fusco, was demolished.

Edward L. Mitzer, of the Westchester Apartments, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a fracture of the ribs as the result of a collision at Pennsylvania avenue and Fourth street northwest. He was riding in a car driven by Samuel H. Seigel, 626 Fifth street northeast. His car hit a truck driven, police said, by Oliver B. Mathis, 39, of Edmonton, Md.

Judge Dismisses $10,000 Suit Against Attorney

Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday dismissed a $10,000 damage suit filed against Attorney John F. Hillyard by William J. Nolan, vice president and general manager of the auto finance firm, M. S. Nolan, Inc., 1102 New York avenue northwest.

Justice Bailey upheld the contention of Hillyard, who appeared as his own counsel, that Nolan failed to assert a cause of action. Nolan accused Hillyard of malicious abuse of process, in filing a $1,000 suit in the Municipal Court, as attorney for Nolan's mother, Mrs. Margaret S. Nolan, against Nolan and the Nolan company. This suit is set for jury trial October 22.

$200 Offered For Arrest Of D. C. Sniper

Police Seek Clews In Double Murder Of Colored Men

A reward of $200 was offered yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the sniper who shot to death two colored men as they sat on a bench in front of 2600 I street northwest early Sunday.

Homicide Squad detectives said they were baffled by the mysterious murders which may be linked to two other recent sniper shootings, one of which was fatal.

Meanwhile, Lieut. John Fowler, police ballistics expert, continued his tests in an attempt to find a clew. Three bullets were removed from the bodies of the victims, Theodore Goffney, 45, of 823½ Twenty-sixth street northwest, and Samuel Banks, 62, of 2600 I street northwest. A fourth bullet was found in a wooden post.

Bullets in the two other sniper shootings passed through the bodies of the victims, Fowler said, and were not recovered.

Jury Holds 2 Men After Inquest In Strangling Case

A coroner's jury yesterday held two colored men for grand jury action in the death of Cornelius R. King, 38, of Silver Hill, Md., whose strangled body was found Tuesday in an alley.

The two are Henry Smith, 21, of 459½ G place northwest, and William A. Clark, 25, of 916 Third street northwest.

An 18-year-old girl testified that King had gone with her to a room in the 400 block of G place, where she said Smith and Clark found them. She said she left when a struggle ensued among the men and did not see the result.

Suspect, 43, Confesses 5 D. C. Holdups

One of Trio Caught After Chase Sunday Admits Perpetrating 'Lock-Chain' Crimes

A 43-year-old rogues gallery character listed as Charles Houghton, one of a trio captured early Sunday in a chase that followed the holdup of a downtown cafeteria, confessed yesterday that he participated in all of Washington's "lock and chain" holdups, according to police.

He had been secretly indicted for three of them, it was disclosed.

In five signed confessions, detectives reported, Houghton admitted his part in robbing Dikeman's restaurant, 609 Fifteenth street northwest, August 22; the Plaza Hotel, 331 First street northeast, August 26; the Rose Marie Shoe Store, 1115 G street northwest, August 31; People's Drug Store, Tenth and F streets northwest, September 11, and Gordon's Cafeteria, 1411 G street northwest, early last Sunday.

A dime store lock and chain was found in the trio's possession after the Gordon holdup. In each of the other cases the gunmen earned the name of "palock bandits" by fastening exits as they left with similar locks and chains to thwart pursuit.

The total loot in the holdups was $2,165, of which $1,400 was obtained from People's Drug Store, where a trio lined half a dozen employes against the wall and ransacked the safe.

For the Plaza Hotel, Dikeman's Restaurant and Rose Marie Shoe Shop robberies, a secret grand jury indicted Houghton after the victims identified his rogues gallery picture as that of one of their assailants.

Meanwhile, police searched the city for him, but it was not until customers chased a holdup trio from Gordon's Cafeteria under a barrage of sugar bowls and glassware that they were successful.

The three g unmen were apprehended in their getaway truck after a chase by the cafeteria's manager, Cecil Bell, later joined by Policemen Glenville Brown and Harrell Reagan.

It was Houghton who then pointed his pistol at Reagan and pulled the trigger, detectives said. But Brown had grabbed the gun in the meantime, and the hammer fell on his finger.

Police quoted Houghton as saying he should have shot himself then, instead of attempting to shoot the policeman.

"I started to commit suicide before, and I should have done it then," the gunman said, according to detectives.

The Bell for Schoolboy— In the first inning, Cincinnati started to pound their 4-0 victory over Detroit yesterday. With one run already across and two men on base, Jimmy Ripple singled to right center, scored Goodman (shown rounding third), advanced F. McCormick (approaching second) to third, and knocked Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe out of the box. Gorsica came in and ended the inning by fanning Wilson and making Joost force Ripple at second

Reds Confident of Victory Behind Derringer

WASHINGTON, OCT. 8, 194

Spirit High After Series Is Evened

Wilson Pulls Up With Two Pulled Muscles; Detroit To 'Fire, Fall Back'

By Charles Dunkley,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—The old "we-can-do-it" spirit boiled over the Cincinnati Reds' clubhouse today as the players rattled up the steel steps with sparks flying from their mouths as well as their spikes.

Manager Bill McKechnie opened up.

"We'll be back in there tomorrow with big Paul Derringer and it will be all over, with us the winner—I hope," the bespectacled McKechnie said.

Bucky Walters, unwinding after a day of brilliant pitching, fielding and hitting, hopped to his locker and tried to undress with one hand. The other was busy shaking with at least 50 persons.

Somebody asked, "what'd you do—close your eyes and swing on that homer?"

"Do you think I can't hit?" he shot back.

Bill Werber also suffered from congratulations, especially on his hand in starting the ninth-inning double play that eliminated Rudy York's last threat and made sure of a shutout for Walters.

Old College Spirit

Powel Crosley, jr., owner of the Reds, came in on his dignity and stayed for a good time. Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants, joined him and told the Reds to make it a National League year.

McKechnie reported that Jimmy Wilson's sixth-inning single was planned that way.

That hit had some Red ink attached, though. Jimmy was worked around to third and had to make his 40-year-old legs pump to score the Reds' third run. He came in with two pulled muscles, both in the right leg.

McKechnie was concerned enough to tell him to go to bed as soon as possible, but Jimmy, the irrepressible, retorted, "I'll tape the damned things up and finish. I'm going to see this through."

Dick Bartell, of the Tigers, threw a flock of bats into a corner in Detroit's clubhouse and sat down disgusted.

"They got all the breaks, but they won't get them tomorrow, what the hell?"

Del Baker said he didn't know who would oppose Derringer, but the players confidently expected it would be Bobo Newsom, who stood the Reds on their heads in Detroit yesterday.

Jockey Barba Hurt in Spill At Jamaica

Fall Follows Victory On Grey Wolf; May Have Fractured Skull

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The riding hero of this afternoon's opening of the Metropolitan Jockey Club's meeting—Johnny Barba—figured in one of the most spectacular falls of the season, one that brought the Brooklyn boy serious injury and perhaps worse. The spill occurred in the event that followed the featured Interborough Handicap, which Barba won astride the long-priced Grey Wolf.

Barba was on P. T. Chinn's Canape, the favorite in the sixth race. Canape appeared to stumble badly as the field tore for the first turn in full view of the stands. The gelding went down in a heap with little Barba and the boy never budged. He was hastily removed from the track, then taken to the track hospital quarters. Quick examination did not divulge the extent of the injury, but it was reported that Barba had a bad gash on the head and may have a fractured skull. He was taken to Mary Immaculate Hospital, Jamaica.

Barba, born in Brooklyn in 1919, is a veteran jockey and is employed by the Clarence Buxton-Trained Stable of W. H. Gallagher. Those who witnessed the accident thought Barba was killed instantly. A few yards after Canape went down, Millshow also stumbled and Wayne Huff slipped out of the saddle. Huff quickly ran off the track, uninjured.

The event was won by Repercussion, which paid $42.10. Count Valiant, the tired pacemaker, was beaten a half length while taking the place from Merry Morn by two lengths.

One Jest, $7.30, beat Sweepalot by a length in the last race. Confiado, the twelfth straight losing favorite, was third.

Wright to Receive 'Horseman of Year' Award Thursday

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 7.—Warren Wright, who retired as a "big" businessman several years ago to devote his time to horse racing, is to receive Thursday night the Thoroughbred Club of America's award of "outstanding horseman of the year.

For the past eight years the Thoroughbred Club has tendered a testimonial dinner to a sportsman who, in its opinion, has made an important contribution to advancement of the "sport of kings."

Wright, once president of the Calumet Baking Powder Co. and a director of several big corporations and banks, most of them in Chicago, now devotes much of his time to the turf. His Calumet Farm, on the main highway between Keeneland race track and Lexington, is one of the show places in the Bluegrass country.

In Whirlaway, Wright has one of the top-notch 2-year-olds of 1940.

Cleveland Manager Attributes Much Of Trouble to Failure of Bosses To Back Him; Says Fans Are for Him

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 7.—Home from the baseball wars and a "nightmarish season," Oscar Vitt, manager of the dissension-wracked Cleveland Indians said today he had not resigned because "I'm no quitter."

He attributed much of his trouble to failure of the club officials to back him.

Vitt expressed belief the player rebellion, which some observers claim cost the Indians the American League pennant, was inspired by two or three disgruntled athletes.

It was climaxed when Bobby Feller, youthful pitching ace, and a number of his teammates marched into the office of Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, and demanded that Vitt cease riding them or quit his job.

Won't Name "Upstarts"

Vitt declined to name the player or players he thought responsible for the trouble, but he told interviewers he was satisfied "the Cleveland fans were for me 100 per cent. They really stuck with me. They acted like champions even if we weren't.

"I knew nothing about the trouble until I got back from a father and son metting at Lynn, Mass., where I appeared as a speaker earlier in

Col. Miller Starts Clearing Desk for Call to Colors

With that "it won't be long now" atmosphere closing in on the District Boxing Commission offices, Secretary Heinie Miller yesterday began winding up the business affairs of the commission in anticipation of his long expected call to active duty with the Fifth Battalion of the United States Marine Reserves.

In military life, Heinie is Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, and it won't be long before he'll hand over his boxing office to a successor to be named by the local commission.

Conn Punches Force Pastor To Quit Ring

Johnston Says Fighter May Retire; Attacks N. Y.'s No-Foul Rule

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 7.—Fight Manager James Joy Johnston tonight charged that his fighter, Heavyweight Bob Pastor, of New York, probably would have to retire from the ring because of "injuries received on foul blows delivered by Light-heavyweight Billy Conn."

(Conn knocked out the New York heavyweight in the thirteenth round of a scheduled 15-round fight in New York on September 6).

At the same time the dapper little manager criticized the no foul rule of the New York Athletic Commission, Johnson claimed that such a ruling does not offer a fighter the proper protection.

"Pastor's physician, Dr. J. Aaron Goldstein," according to the manager, "said it would be impossible for the New York State champion to accept any boxing matches for at least six months and then only after rigid examination. Pastor has lost so much weight that he now weighs only 176 pounds. If he shows no improvement in the coming month a very serious operation may be necessary."

Easy Chair Calling to Jim Wilson

Liniment to Be Reds' Catcher's First Buy With Series Money; 'Needs Sympathizer'

By Henry McLemore,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—Win or lose, Jimmy Wilson's first purchase out of his World Series money will include seven rocking chairs, four hammocks, six gallons of imported liniment, and the day and night services of a professional sympathizer.

The minute the series ends tomorrow, the 40-year-old Reds' catcher, who came out of retirement to work behind the plate, plans to leave for his home in Philadelphia. Then, for three months he will alternate between the rocking chairs and the hammocks, stirring himself only enough to slosh more liniment over his bones.

"I aim to have the sympathizer sit besides me and join me in my groans and moans," Jimmy explained. "Nobody really knows how I feel after catching this series, and I want some kind of person near me while I rest to shoo off people who try to get me to move."

Wilson set the world's record for weariness today when he slumped down in the locker room after catching Bucky Walters in his 4-to-0 shutout of the Tigers in the sixth game. He sort of collapsed on the bench, too tired to take off even his cap. Owner Powel Crosley came by to congratulate him, but Jimmy was too spent to even shake hands.

"When I tried to get out of bed the morning after the first game, I counted 37 distinct snaps and pops somewhere in my bones," Wilson said slowly. "After the second game there were 48 creaking sounds, and by this morning I sounded like a batch of squirrels on a roof when I staggered up. When I started to get up I bet myself ten bucks, even money, I wouldn't make it."

Play by Play Of Cincinnati's 4-to-0 Victory

TIGERS

Bartell took one strike, and then lifted a high fly to Ripple. With the count one strike and two balls, McCosky lifted a pop foul which Werber took in front of the boxes near third base. Ripple made a running catch of Gehringer's fly in the left field corner. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

REDS

Werber waited out a three-to-two count, and then belted a liner against the fence in left field 328 feet from the plate, and made second before Greenberg could recover the ball. M. McCormick laid down a sacrifice bunt on the first pitch and was thrown out, Rowe to York, Werber reaching third. Goodman hit the first pitch on a bounce to York about 30 feet from first base and reached the bag for a single before Rowe could get there to take a throw, Werber scoring on the play. F. McCormick waited out a count of two balls and one strike, and then shot a vicious single along the third base line, Goodman holding up at second. John Gorsica, a right-hander, started warming up in the Tiger bull pen. Ripple sent a long foul into the right field stands, and then singled sharply to right center, scoring Goodman and sending F. McCormick to third. Rowe was replaced by Gorsica. Wilson took one strike, popped a foul while trying to bunt, and then struck out on the third pitch. Higgins raced to his left to make an almost miraculous pickup of Joost's grounder and throw to Gehringer to force Ripple at second.

SECOND INNING

TIGERS—Greenberg struck out on four pitches, the last being Walters' favorite sinker. York took one strike, and then sent a long fly to Goodman in right field. Campbell got the count to three and two and then walked on an inside pitch. Higgins singled into short left moving Campbell to second. Tebbetts took two strikes, and then bounced to Walters and was thrown out.

REDS—Myers looked at three straight balls and then struck out. Walters, with two strikes against him, bounced to Gorsica and was thrown out. With the count one strike and two balls, Werber punched a single through short. M. McCormick topped the ball in front of the plate and was thrown out by Tebbetts.

THIRD INNING

TIGERS—Gorsica swung at two pitches, and then flied to M. McCormick in deep center. Bartell looked at three balls and two called strikes, and then doubled down the left-field foul line. With two strikes against him, McCosky lined

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—There is more than a suspicion that the 1940 World Series is being played by two ball teams that are something less than good ball teams. In fact, they are probably the two worst ball clubs that ever found themselves in a series since the 1920 Dodgers and Indians stumbled into the October opus.

POVICH

Tonight, as the figure hounds searched for new hitting or fielding records, the Tigers and Reds might have established for World Series play, at least one new record suggests itself: First time two second-division clubs ever played in a World Series.

The Reds, who won the National League pennant by 12 games, apparently didn't beat much in the National League from how we view them in this World Series. They have two good pitchers, and a sprightly infield, but they are, by and large, strictly a bunch of singles hitters who would be overpowered any time they don't get good pitching.

The Tigers sort of stumbled into the American League pennant anyway. The horrendous collapse of the Yankees left the league race wide open, and in the final tests they had to cope only with the light-hitting Cleveland Indians who were never long on courage. The Tigers have power, better than tolerable pitching, but they have also probably the worst infield that ever discovered itself in a World Series.

That Tiger infield has to be seen to be properly depreciated. If there is a dime around, Shortstop Dick Bartell and Second Baseman Charley Gehringer are playing on it. That is a sad fact—sad because both Bartell and Gehringer used to be great infielders. But the spring in their legs has gone. Hits through the infield that they used to turn into easy putouts are now bounding free. The double-play precision is lost. They go neither to their right nor left. A half dozen times in this series, younger men would have cut off Cincinnati hits.

Frank Higgins has provided perhaps the chief surprise of this series. Until it began, he was also classed as one of the Ancient Mariners of the Detroit infield—"he stoppeth one of three." But something, somehow, has infused new life into the supposedly decrepit Higgins. He has been a standout defensive star with a series of spectacular plays. Yet all season he was not a good third baseman. In fact, Rudy York, who was never rated among the first-base elite, was the best Tiger infielder of the 1940 season.

But despite the lack of even one of the fine ball clubs to which World Series fans have been accustomed, it is not a dull series. It is spiced with that always-desired element—competition. It has now reached seven games, a development that always keeps the fans and critics in a dither.

None of the games have been close. Two runs is the closest margin by which any game has been won and that happened only once. Yet the rotation of victories has served to key the series to a pitch unequaled since the Cards and Tigers fought it out on a seven-game basis in 1934. The Tigers, incidentally lost that one, suggesting some kind of an omen, perhaps. For the first time since 1924, two teams are swapping victories on alternate days in the World Series. That happened in 1924 when the Nats and Giants see-sawed for seven games with Washington winning.

If this series were being played according to script of hired dramatists it would have dished up no more intriguing and exciting a climax as it has stumbled into—the teams tied at the end of six games, the seventh game scheduled in hysterical Cincinnati, and the pitchers Buck Newsom and Paul Derringer.

For the moment he walked off the field a winner against the Tigers in the fourth game, Derringer was destined to pitch the seventh game, if there were a seventh. Walters would be used up by that time, and Derringer would be the only man available to Manager Bill McKechnie with any sort of a bright chance to stop the Detroit sluggers. The big right-hander demonstrated his ability to come back. Pounded from the box in two innings of the first game, he muffled the Tigers' guns with a five-hit job in the fourth, attesting to both his pitching ability and his gameness. But it is Buck Newsom who is providing the pitching story of this World Series. He now threatens to become the first pitcher to win three World Series games since 1926. And that in a week in which he is mourning his father's death. Manager Del Baker has not nominated him definitely for the pitching job tomorrow, but Newsom appears to be Baker's natural choice.

Newsom is not a bad sort to string along with, despite his mere one day of rest since his fifth-game victory that gave the Tigers a 3-2 lead. He has pitched and won two clutch games and he has never complained of overwork. Buck is just a big, strong guy who has always thrived on work.

One thing is certain: It will be a sadly disappointed Newsom if any other Detroit pitcher goes out there at the start of tomorrow's game. If we know Newsom, he wants the job. He'd love it. If he does not already have an understanding with Baker that he will be tomorrow's pitcher for the Tigers, Buck is asking for it with his eyes every time he looks at Baker. If that doesn't bring Baker's consent, then, if we know Newsom, he'll just plainly walk right up to the Tiger manager and ask him, please, if he can pitch the Tigers to the championship.

'Feast or Famine for Us,' Says Baker—Our Turn Today

By Del Baker
Manager of the Detroit Tigers (INS.)

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—You've got to have hits to get runs and you've got to have runs to win ball games. You can't hit into double-plays and still enjoy the "big" innings which a club like the Tigers must have to come out on top.

That's the story of our defeat today.

Thus far in the World's Series, it has been either feast or famine with us—and on alternate days. According to my mathematics that schedule ought to mean base hits for us tomorrow. And I don't need to go into detail on what base hits tomorrow will mean to the Tigers and those loyal fans back in Detroit.

BAKER

In a sense, the Tiger Club has had its back to the wall since the start of the season. There have been plenty of times during this campaign that we have felt we had to win a vital game on the next day to stay in the running. Consequently, the spot we find ourselves in for tomorrow is familiar to us. In fact, we would scarcely know how to act if we didn't have our backs to the wall.

But don't forget—the Reds have their backs to the same wall. We'll be digging in there every inch of the way, and I think we'll make

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 7.—With an eye toward the game with Princeton there Saturday, Maj. "Swede" Larson, head coach, today deviated from his usual Monday program by having all of the available regulars on the field and going through some form of practice.

Reports from the infirmary were that the few remaining casuals are coming along nicely, although the list received two additions Saturday as the result of the bruising contest with University of Cincinnati. These were Sammy Boothe and Ev Malcolm, both high caliber backs, and it is likely they will not be in shape for use against the Tigers.

Boothe suffered a bad laceration of the face that required several stitches, while Malcolm has a couple of shattered ribs. In their stead, however, big Cliff Lenz, and Phil Gutting, who have been of little service so far, are expected to be ready within a few days.

One Tiger Scoring Chance That Fizzled

Four Tie for Mid-Atlantic Women's Golf Qualifying Medal

Mrs. Sloman, Mrs. Walper In Quartet

Mrs. Schluderberg, Miss Houghton Also Finish With 84's; Play Starts Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The first four-way medal tie in local women's golf history marked the qualifying round of the fifteenth annual Middle Atlantic Championship yesterday at Chevy Chase Club. Two Baltimoreans, Mrs. Jerome Sloman and Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, and the finalists in the District Championship, Elizabeth Houghton, the winner, and Mrs. Leo Walper, the losers, finished in the quadruple tie at 84.

All the favorites qualified for match play in the championship flight that starts this morning. Defending Champion Mrs. Walter R. Stokes was safely in with an 87 while Mrs. Betty Meckley, a former titlist, missed the medal tie by a singl shot with an 85.

Two former champs from Baltimore, Mrs. M. Louise Bell and Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, scored 88 and 86, respectively, while Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, and another former champion, Mrs. David Clark, of the host club, qualified but tossed away medal chances on the finishing holes. Mrs. Davy had 88 and Mrs. Clark 90.

D. C. Players Shaded

The District players took a back seat in the medal rounds. Eight of Baltimore's small contingent filled half of the first flight while Mrs. W. H. Wise, of the Chamberlin Country Club, Old Point Comfort, Va., made the grade with an 89, including 42 strokes on the out nine, tied for lowest of the day. Mrs. Thomas Brandon, of Washington Club in Ballston, Va., was in with 91.

Miss Houghton's medal tying round included four three-putt greens but she made up for two of them by dropping a 30-foot birdie putt on the fifteenth and a tough putt for a deuce on the fourth hole. Mrs. Walper's round was featured by pars on all of the tough par three holes, a performance unequaled for the day.

Mrs. Sloman, the 1938 Maryland State champion and Mrs. Schluderberg, medalist in the same tournament and a former Baltimore City titlist, were playing partners and played about alike. Mrs. Sloman's nines were 43-41 and Mrs. Schluderberg's 44-40, the latter including a bad seven on the fourth hole. Mrs. Sloman played a great approach shot on the eighteenth and had a sinkable putt for an 83 but the ball rimmed the cup.

64 Turn in Cards

The four will play off for the medal, possibly Saturday morning or some morning next week. Mrs. Bell, who came back in 40 after going out in 48, won the medal last year.

Mrs. H. C. Trace, of Terra Mariae, made the championship flight with a 93, and no play-off was necessary. Everything seemed to come out even as exactly 64 players turned in cards, just enough for four full flights of 16 players.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, who has played in a majority of the Middle Atlantic championships, and went to the semifinals last year, did not compete, as she is leaving with Helen Dettweiler today or tomorrow for Texas where they will compete in the State Women's Open championship. Mrs. Bishop Hill, a potential tourney threat from the host club, was out of town.

Two matches feature the first round card this morning, Mrs. Davy against Mrs. Bell and two clubmates, Miss Houghton and Mrs. Clark, who is capable of springing a few upsets although she hasn't played much tournament golf of late.

Mrs. Stokes, who already holds the Maryland State Championship and is seeking a double-header triumph, is up against a good match play competitor, Gladys Greiner, of Baltimore, in the first round. Among the players who just missed the first flight were Mrs. Ralph Holdsmith, Woodmont Club champ; Mrs. Hume Peabody, Quantico, and Mrs. H. J. Simons, Manor.

Cornell Rated Tops In College Football

By Paul B. Williamson
Noted Football Selector.

Despite one of the craziest week-ends of upsets in many seasons of college football, the system managed to maintain a winning average of 81 per cent as Cornell supplanted Duke at the top of the list.

The Big Reds of Cornell earned the No. 1 ranking by walloping Colgate, 34-0, while erstwhile leading Duke fell before Tennessee's Vols, 13-0, in one of the day's minor surprises.

By the victory the Vols moved into the Big Ten at sixth place, while Duke dropped from the select group.

Closest pick in the major games was Colorado, 7; Kansas State, 6. Both teams were rated at 81.3, but we liked Colorado by a shade.

Liked Michigan

Michigan's 21-14 triumph over Michigan State vindicated our choice in a battle of giants. Oklahoma also came through in a close one to justify a reverse of our preseason ratings by nosing out Oklahoma Aggies, 29-27. The system was practically alone in selecting Auburn to knock over Tulane, 20-14.

Outstanding picks were Richmond over V. P. I., 13-7; Texas over Indiana, 13-6; George Washington over Manhattan, 21-18; Minnesota over Nebraska, 13-7; Notre Dame over College of Pacific, 25-7; Ohio State over Purdue, 17-4, and Northwestern over Syracuse, 40-0.

Other good picks were Western Reserve over Akron, 6-0; North Carolina over Davidson, 27-7; Fordham over West Virginia, 20-7; Georgia Tech over Howard, 27-0; Illinois over Bradley, 31-0; Kentucky over Washington and Lee, 47-12; Baylor over Denver, 14-7; Detroit over Catholic U., 13-0; South Dakota State over Omaha, 12-7; Georgetown Temple, 14-0; Marshall over Dayton, 25-12; Penn over Maryland, 51-0; Portland over Pacific U., 25-7; Rice over Centenary, 25-0; Georgia over South Carolina, 33-2; Stanford over Oregon, 13-0; Texas Aggies over Tulsa, 41-6; T. C. U. over Arkansas, 20-0; Toledo over Davis Elkins, 34-12; Navy over Cincinnati, 14-0; Villanova over Penn Military, 53-14; Wake Forest over Furman, 19-0; Washington State

Godoy Wins Decision Over Gus Dorazio

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Arturo Godoy, the South American heavyweight from Chile, took the first step towards a third meeting with Champion Joe Louis tonight by outmauling Gus Dorazio, of Philadelphia, to win a 10-round decision in a rough bout. There were no knockdowns.

The Chilean, with an 8-pound weight margin at 202, piled up a big advantage by fighting at close quarters and won the decision unanimously. Nearly 5,000 saw the fight.

Using the same crouching tactics that helped him go 15 rounds with Louis in their first meeting, Godoy outwrestled, outshoved and outhugged Dorazio in a slow bout that drew boos from the crowd at the end.

Altogether the South American won six rounds. Dorazio spurted to take the fourth and tenth while two rounds were called even.

Cards Ask Waivers On Bobby Kellogg

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Coach Jimmy Conzelman, of the Chicago Cardinals, of the National Professional Football League, announced today he had asked waivers on Bobby Kellogg, halfback from Tulane, and Robert Wood, former Alabama end.

Jim Thomson To Exhibit Here Today

Pro Game's Longest Driver and Spencer Vie at East Potomac

Jimmy Thomson will continue the flow of golf personalities into the city today as the game's biggest slugger is scheduled to arrive this morning for at least three exhibition matches in and around the District.

THOMSON

Thomson will play a match at East Potomac this afternoon with the three public links professionals, starting at 1:30. He is scheduled to appear at the new Naval Academy course in Annapolis tomorrow and at Army and Navy Thursday.

This afternoon's match will pit pro golf's longest hitter and Cliff Spencer, acknowledged to be the District's longest hitter, against each other and between them the boys should pound out some long-distance drives over the flat course.

Thomson and Al Price, Rock Creek pro, will meet Spencer and Bill Carson, Anacostia mentor, and the match is open to the public.

Tomorrow Jimmy will go to Annapolis and pair with Host Pro Bob Williams against Congressional's topnotch pro-amateur duo of Wiffy Cox and Ralph Bogart. The match will start at 1:30.

On Thursday Allan Burton, the Army-Navy pro and brother Danny, of Quantico, who gave Gene Sarazen and Cliff Spencer a good match earlier in the season, will team again, this time against Thomson and Cox.

Thomson, who in his last competitive appearance lived up to his reputation by winning the driving contest preceding the Scranton Open, is making the tours as a good-will ambassador of the major sporting goods firm in Chicopee, Mass.

Tarbrush Top-Weighted For Rolling Rock 'Chase

Pittsburgh, Oct. 7 (AP).—Tarbrush, C. Mahlon Kline's 6-year-old chestnut gelding by Sun Beau, will carry top weight of 153 pounds in the feature race of the Dolling Dock Hunt Racing Association's seventh annual steeplechase meeting on Wednesday.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—The only thing really tight about the 1940 World Series is the reporter who came thousands of miles to cover the classic, and then woke up in Windsor, Ontario, surrounded by a bevy of patriotic blondes who convinced him that he should enlist in the Canadian marines.

The series games are tied up like the contortionist deep sea diver, who came out of his decompression chamber too soon. Games stand at three apiece, and you'd think the thing would be closer than quarter after three. But there hasn't been a close game since the thing started.

CONSIDINE

Buck Newsom won the first game, going away, 7-2. Bucky Walters won the second, 5-3, but the Tigers were never in it after the first inning, and got only three hits. Bridges won the third game, 7-4, the Tigers finishing so strongly that they made the Reds look like chumps. Derringer was complete master of the fourth game, won it 5-2 and allowed only five hits. Newsom was untouchable in the fifth game, won 8-0 on three hits. And today Walters was the boss from start to finish, winning 4-0 on five hits.

It has been strictly see-saw and strictly one-sided—so much so that the Reds are sore they didn't start the see-saw going by winning the first game. For inasmuch as the thing alternates every day, they'd be winning the odd game instead of the even game, and thus would win the first, third, fifth and seventh, instead of the second, fourth and sixth.

Tomorrow? You got me there, pal. Both pitching staffs are shot. Or at least they're far from rested. Paul Derringer must pitch with two days rest at the end of a trying season. Buck Newsom comes back with one day's rest and, though he's a lot of man, it is asking an awful lot. We suspect that tomorrow's game finally will be close—both in the runs scored and the number of relief pitchers used.

Should Newsom win he will be the first man to win three games in a World series since Stanley Coveleskie did it for the Indians in the 1920 Brooklyn-Cleveland series. Only other three-game winners were Babe Adams, of Pittsburgh, in the 1909 Tigers-Pirates series; Urban Faber, of the White Sox, in the 1917 Chicago-New York Giants series; Jack Coombs, of the Athletics, in the 1910 Athletics-Cubs series, and Christy Mathewson, of the Giants, in the New York-Athletics series of 1905. Bill Dineen, who later became an umpire, won three games for the Red Sox in the 1903 series between the Sox and Pirates, but this was before the World Series was the World Series.

Broadway is going to get a minimum of Hank Greenberg's series money. He plans to go to Honolulu for a rest after the series . . . Provided, of course, it is all right with the Draft Board people.

Only casualties of the series were the pants of Frank McCormick and Barney McCosky. McCormick broke his bloomers in the second game, and McCosky split his today. Assistant trainers with adhesive tape came to the rescue—to stick Chinese symbol patches over the splits.

P. S.—Mickey Cochrane officially joined Ty Cobb and Jack Lait as a weaving-and-bobbing fan of championship caliber during the Detroit end of the series. He was all over his seat, twitched on every pitch, lurched with every catch, and left the ball yard white and shaken.

F. & M. Celebrates 1st Major Win in 26 Years

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 7 (AP).—It's been 26 years since Franklin-Marshall has beaten a major college football team, so today students were given a holiday to celebrate the Diplomats' surprise 23-21 victory over Dartmouth on Saturday.

Back in 1914 F. & M. defeated Pennsylvania, 10-0. Memories of that victory were revived when a crowd of 1,000 turned out yesterday to greet the returning 1940 Diplomats from Hanover, N. H.

Buddy Walker Wins Decision Over Musto

Baltimore, Oct. 7 (AP).—Buddy Walker, Columbus, Ohio, heavyweight, came back from a third-round knockdown tonight to maul out a decisive 10-round victory over Tony Musto, Chicago. Walker weighed 188½, Musto 190.

The Ohioan caught one of Musto's looping rights on the jaw shortly after the start of the third round and thudded to the canvas. He spurned the full nine count, however, and went bouncing back full of fight.

Alvis Seeks Zivic To Head Ring Card Here October 28

Boxing's holiday in Washington will end October 28 when Ray Alvis steps into the picture dominated by Promoter Joe Turner to put on a fight show at Riverside Stadium which may feature Fritzie Zivic, newly-crowned world's welterweight champion.

Alvis announced his plans for the venture yesterday and left last night for Pittsburgh to confer with Luke Carney, manager of Zivic, over plans for a fight at Riverside—in all probability a non-title affair.

"If I can't get Zivic, but I'm pretty sure I can, I'm going on up to New York to try to arrange some other big time show," Alvis said. "I'm not interested in anything that won't draw $5,000 or better." With the Boxing Commission upping its take on the gates from 5 to 10 per cent, it's too much of a gamble to fool with anything small."

Zivic, who upset the dope with his sensational 15-round victory over Henry Armstrong for the title Friday night, is under contract to make his next title defense against Armstrong.

Alvis, who's been dabbling in everything from walkathons to promoting six-day bicycle races, piloted two fighters to the world's welterweight title and at one time had a stable of 56 battlers.

Gil Hall Advances At Hot Springs Net

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 7 (AP).—J. Gilbert Hall, of New York, defending champion, smashed out a straight set victory 6-2, 6-2, over J. Potter Stockton, of New York, today in the opening round of the twenty-eighth annual Hot Spring Fall Tennis Tournament.

Hall was seeded number one; Alex Guerry, New York, seeded two; Samuel Gilpin, Philadelphia, seeded three, and Harry Berno, Cleveland, seeded four.

YES, SIR, that's just the way it happened. Paul Jones' popularity has been growing so fast it's amazing!

Here's what happened: Paul Jones had made a hit with connoisseurs because of its non-sweet dryness. And we knew many Americans preferred their drinks dry and tangy. But this whiskey was priced a little higher than many folks were used to paying.

So we reduced the price—without changing any of Paul Jones' expensive qualities!

Here's a suggestion: try Paul Jones yourself. See if its swell, tangy dryness doesn't make a Paul Jones fan out of you, too! Frankfort Distilleries, Inc., Louisville & Baltimore.

Raise Up Wins Shawsheen Purse Over Chatted at Laurel

Tower Stable 3-Year-Old Pays $12.40

Wins by 5 Lengths Before 6,500; Evans' Phone Dijon Turns in Fast Distance Race

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 7.—The Tower Stable's Raise Up, an aptly-named daughter of Ariel and Parasol, showed her rear plates to seven other good 3-year-olds today in the Shawsheen Purse, heading an interesting eight-race program. The Milky Way Farm's Chatted was second. Thus the first two horses finished in the reverse of the order that marked a meeting between the pair last week. Chatted was up in time to win going away on that occasion in the mud. Today, on a fast track, Raise Up jogged to the imaginary wire five lengths in advance of her stretch running rival.

Raise Up had a five-pound shift in weight in her favor, but the crowd of 6,500 was only lukewarm toward her chances and she paid $12.40. Jockey D. Madden put up a fine ride to bring her over the mile and 70 yards course in 1:43 2-5. The oval was still a bit on the dull side of fast.

First Out of Stall

Raise Up was first to come out of the stall gate when Starter Jim Milton pressed the button. Brown Saxon and Damaged Goods pressed the pacemaker to the backstretch and then she drew out gradually to hold a four-length lead at the far turn. Chatted, as is the custom, was a conspicuous last to the half pole. Jockey C. Bierman finally got him to do some serious running.

Chatted went through on the inside but there was no catching of the front running filly today. Bierman pushed Chatted for all he was worth but Raise Up was running easily. When Bierman saw there just was no catching the filly today, he eased up. War Beauty had rallied mildly turning for home but was three lengths off Chatted at the finish.

T. Lee Evans' Phone Dijon turned in the fastest distance race of the meeting in the day's seventh event. The son of Microphone and Dijonette hopped to the front at once and won by four lengths in time of 1:59 3-5 for a mile and three-sixteenths. This was only two-fifths of a second over the track record held by Frogtown. Four lengths behind the winner, ridden by Jockey Joe Wagner, came Tanganyika from the Bedwell barn, to be second in front of the Milky Way Farm's Gross Plenty, the choice in the field of eight. The winner paid $8.40.

$230 Daily Double

Daily Double players with tickets to cash collected $230.20 for the two-buck investment. Barrymore, owned by J. H. Stotler, led every inch of the way in the opening event, forgetting to stop this time. The Milky Way Farm's Merry Bid was second with Fitzedward, owned by H. P. Metcalf, third. Barrymore paid $9.40.

D. J. Sullivan's Dark Watch put the finishing touches on the "double" by taking the third race from King's Colors and Dorothy Pomp. All the well-played horses were out of the money circle. Jockey C. Friedman put up a good job of riding on the $28 shot which came through on the rail and went on to win going away. The test was over the mile and 70 yards course.

One of the few successes of the favorite players came in the steeplechase event that went to J. H. C. Forbes' Baffler, a $4.70 proposition. Judges Bid was second and Playdema third. Prince Wick stumbled and tossed Jockey T. Terrell into flying hoofs. The boy was kicked and suffered cuts about the head and a sprained leg.

BARRYMORE had keen speed to open a good lead at once, was tiring at the end and was put to pressure to stave off MERRY BID. The latter was hard ridden closest to the pace and responded to a strong hand ride to be gaining at every stride at the end. FITZEDWARD raced on the inside in the dull going and showed a good effort. ALPINE LAD was held safe while close up.

BAFFLER, raced while close up for the mile, went to the front to open a lead and was an easy winner. JUDGES BID made bad landings and recovered to close with good courage under strong handling. PLAYDEMA had good speed to set the pace and tired gradually after being displaced. ROUGE CATALAN closed gamely. PRINCE WICK was leading when he stumbled and lost his rider.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:36. Winner, D. J. DARK WATCH, going in best form, off in a tangle, found racing room on the inside approaching the stretch and withstood a long, hard drive to win while opening a gap. KING'S COLORS, off in front, set a good pace, could not resist the winner, but closed gamely. DOROTHY POMP, off slowly and rushed to contention, hung in the final drive. IN MEMORY moved up with good energy nearing the stretch and weakened suddenly. NIJINSKY stopped after a half.

Daily Double, BARRYMORE and DARK WATCH, Paid $230.20

DAWN ATTACK carried TAMIL, GREEK JURIST and PATROL FLIGHT wide entering the stretch.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al: By tomorrow we should know which horses will run in the Pimlico Special, the race that Alfred G. Vanderbilt has been staging each year at Pimlico. Last year, Challedon licked Kayak II to gain the honor as "best horse of the year." It has been my contention for some time that Calledon will meet Mioland at weight for age. However, in view of late developments, Has, Isolater and Fenalon may be others in the field. However, the Special is not confined to handicap horses and could be a 2-year-old or a 3-year-old test. But there seems no occasion for such a race. More than 12,000 programs were sold here last Saturday, which makes the press box estimate of a 16,000 crowd apear about right. Betting was $453,176, against $381,245 on the first Saturday last year. Good news for the track, but bad news for the horsemen was the report from New York that Vanderbilt's New World will be shipped down from New York to go in Saturday's Maryland Futurity. Washington Jake, also known as Jockey Jake and Jockey No Boy, but a likable cuss any way you take him, arrived from Belmont Park and he "ain't doing no good" as usual. Bill Schamhorn, assistant to Starter Jim Milton, who was kicked by a horse during the schooling hours last week, is in serious condition in a Baltimore hospital. His injury, thought to be a concussion, proved to be a skull fracture. Roy Waldron, one of our favorite trainers, saddled three winners last Saturday, and with four to his credit tops the conditioners here. Jockey A. Craig was an arrival and swung into action. He starred around Chicago and New England. Jockey Willie Garner, who won the New York Handicap with Shot Put, is coming to Laurel late this week. Speaking of Shot Put, Ray Bryson has a 2-year-old named Firm Grip, which is a full brother of the winner of the rich race. Balapin, which broke down last Saturday, has ben turned out. Art Brown, who went broke last Wednesday, should be turned out. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Weatherite failed to match strides with Stimady last outing but in her previous race bested Crepe Myrtle and Stolen Tryst. Back among her own kind she appears well placed. Stolen Tryst has been beaten by the top horse and figures next in line. Steady On beat better grade platers in New York.

Second race—Broadside King has been idle since Pimlico this spring but was so highly favored when competing against steeplechasers of the handicap division that he is selected to score in this claiming event. Meeting House showed fair form at Delaware. Santi Quaranti can better his recent New York race.

Third race—Tipper Dipper was blocked when making his bid in his last race and lost all chance. Favorite in that heat and meeting a similar field here, he should get up for the score. Ceiling Zero disappointed in his last but is capable of better effort. Coquelicot was fair at Delaware.

Fourth race—Fair Hero started twice at Delaware winning his second start easily in 0:59 3-5, only 2-5 of a second off the track record. The youngster has been training well and is reported ready. Chief contention is expected to come from Hardy Bud after his victory in the Salem Handicap. Thrift Shop raced well in New York.

Fifth race—Ekwanok was second to Woodchopper at Belmont recently and in his previous outing whipped the fleet Call to Colors in track record time. Roncat was a distant second to Mioland in the Potomac at Havre and figures next in line. Son Alleese is at his best but moves up.

Sixth race—Walter Light ran two successive seconds behind Purcellville and Shailleen at Havre indicating that he is at his best. He receives the call here in a wide open contest. Stand Alone was outrun by Blazing Heat in the mud but should do better on a fast track. Flaming High was right behind the top horse last out and is dangerous.

Seventh race—Interlace, second to Shalleen last week, drops down in this affair and meets a field she should beat. Quaroma showed good effort behind Autumn Quest last start and shapes up as the principal contender. Swami is not overmatched.

Eighth race—Warlaine was a winner at Havre and displayed good speed when third to Flag Post last start. He has the edge over these cheaper grade platers. Black Grouse has been performing well in cheap company and will be the one to beat. Bounding Count is showing improvement and figures to be close.

LAUREL (Fast)

6—Simkoe, Stand Alone, Walter Light.

G. U. Coach Believes Ghecas, Lio, Matuza Are All-Americas

Mike Kopcik Overlooked, Says Writer

Big End Called Hoyas' Most Valuable; His All-Around Play and Fine Punting Cited

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown University, having projected its football squad into the rosy glow of the national spotlight, now is starting a campaign to win individual honors for several of the stalwarts who have been chiefly instrumental in the fashioning of the school's 18-game undefeated streak.

Comes word from the Hilltop athletic office, which also was sent to 325 other sports departments, that Coach Jack Hagerty, who is not wont to be permiscuous with his praise, is personally indorsing three senior players for serious All-America consideration. They are Augie Lio, 210-pound guard who won All-Eastern laurels last year; Allen Matuza, 195-pound center, and Lou Ghecas, fleet 180-pound halfback.

These three undoubtedly are great football players and fully deserving of Hagerty's commendation, but we wonder if the Georgetown coach has not overlooked perhaps his outstanding star—a youngster who, to our way of thinking, is Georgetown's most valuable chattel.

We speak of Mike Kopcik, the Hoyas' star junior end and best punter who played so brilliant a game against N. Y. U. last year that Manhattan sports writers went out of their way to plug him for a berth on the All-America sophomore team, which Kopcik did receive.

Not only is Mike a fine all-around end—a smasher who is most feared by teams dependent largely on a passing attack—but he also is a punter with few equals. Attesting to his ability to boot the pigskin with the best in the country was his performance Friday night as Georgetown beat Temple, 14-0. Twice Kopcik kicked over 60 yards on the fly and the ball was downed inside the Owls' 10-yard line. His first prodigious effort carried 64 yards and was touched dead on the Temple 6-yard line by Augie Lio, and his second traveled 66 yards.

There isn't an end in this territory so difficult to fool as Kopcik, nor one who can spoil so many end runs. Nine times out of ten the powerful 195-pound Hilltop star crashes through the interference and spills the ball carrier for a loss. Generally after about two tries at Kopcik's end the opposition discovers it's no use, and thereafter carefully steers plays in another direction.

So here is a nomination for Kopcik for All-America, even if it isn't worth more than the three cents you spent to read it.

While on the subject of Georgetown and Al Matuza, it appears that in spite of Matuza's undoubted ability and Hagerty's approval of him as All-America timber the big senior has a real job on his hands to retain a regular position. Jim Reichey, Matuza's understudy all of last year, a player who has been rated just a shade inferior, arose to new heights in the Temple game giving the outstanding performance by any Georgetown lineman. All of which creates a small problem for Coach Hagerty who says Reichey is too valuable to keep out of the lineup but who doesn't know how to get him in.

Meantime Hagerty was also pondering reports that indicate Waynesburg, which will be met here Friday night, may not be the setup that many expect. The Yellow Jackets lost 26-0, to formidable Duquesne in their opener but came back last week to roll up 33 points against Potomac State Teachers while using their regulars so sparingly that Hoya scouts were unable to get a line on them.

Moreover, it is the same Waynesburg team that gave Fordham a terrific scare last season in the only college football game televised and finished its season with six victories, one tie and one loss, including among its victims Geneva and St. Vincent's, a pair of very powerful small college elevens.

G. W. Regains Services Of End Dan Douglas

George Washington yesterday welcomed back to football camp Dan Douglas, a highly regarded reserve end who has been recuperating from an emergency appendectomy performed September 2. Capable of playing either left or right end, Douglas will be a big help to the Colonial's none-too-strong wingmen group and may cause Coach Reinhart to shift Harry Ledford back to the backfield, whence he came to fill Douglas' place.

The Colonials who risk their two-game undefeated record to W. and L. at Lexington Saturday concentrated in yesterday's practice on forward pass defense which seemed weak as Manhattan completed eight aerials against the Buff and Blue last Saturday.

Maryland Planning Surprises for Virginia

Maryland Coach-spokesman Jack Faber yesterday spoke philosophically of the last excursion of the Terrapin eleven which produced a 51-0 shellacking by Penn and predicted the Old Liners would offer better competition to Virginia Saturday. The game with Virginia's surprising Cavaliers who gave Yale a trouncing last week-end will be Maryland's homecoming.

C. U. Out to Avenge '39 Loss to St. Anselm's

Catholic University's Cardinals, apparently not designed to go anywhere in a football way this season after an opening-game defeat by Detroit, means to settle an old score Saturday when they meet St. Anselm's in Manchester, N. H. St. Anselm's, if you will recall, was the obscure little team that up and knocked the Cardinals out of an undefeated season last year by the box-car figure of 39-13. This year St. Anselm's doesn't have McLean, the guy who ran wild against the Cardinals in 1939, and apparently they don't have anyone to take his place. So the Cardinals can be excused if they go up there and kick the stuffing out of the Hawks.

A. U. Students Tax Selves Again for Team

Students of American University who in 1938 voted voluntarily to "tax" themselves $10 a year for expansion of the school's varsity athletics program yesterday agreed to make further donations in support of the Eagles football team.

Encouraged by Saturday's showing of the A. U. eleven which, though losing, 33-13, to Susquehanna, made twice as many touchdowns as last year's team all year, the student assembly voted to hold a special meeting Monday to decide what steps should be taken to help the gridmen.

A representative of the students then made known to Staff Cassell, football coach and director of athletics, what they had planned to do and asked details of the most pressing needs of the football squad and how best they could be supplied.

Cassell, after expressing his great delight over this further demonstration of unusual school spirit at American University, told the spokesman to meet with him again when plans for the proposal had been made definite.

Offer of additional student help in giving A. U. a representative small college football team moved Cassell to predict that by 1942 the school should realize that ambition.

Redskin Coach Fears Pass Defense of Cards

The Redsins' 40-10 rout of Pittsburgh's Steelers has installed them as the strongest offensive club in the National Football League, but if the Skins' have any ideas of taking the forthcoming Chicago Cardinal game lightly, Coach Ray Flaherty has a remedy.

Flaherty's antidote for overconfidence is a reminder that the Cardinals have the best defense in the league against the Redskins' main weapon—passing.

The Redskins, who in addition to jumping from third to first place in scoring, retained their forward passing lead and moved up to second place in ground gaining, will start work this morning a t 10 o'clock at Griffith Stadium for the Cardinal game here Sunday.

They'll start work with one of the main cogs in their offense so far this year—Veteran Wingback Ed Justice—out of action for the next four games. Justice suffered a broken collarbone—technically a dislocated clavicle, Georgetown Hospital physicians said yesterday—in the Steeler game.

Statistics released by the National League in New York yesterday disclosed that while the Redskins lead in passing efficiency with 35 completions out of 60 for 68 per cent, the Cardinals have shown the tightest aerial defense. The Chicagoans have had only 30 per cent pass completions against them.

The Skins forged to the front in points with a total of 85 in three games and have averaged 291 yards per game, only 14 behind the Green Bay Packers' 305 average.

Louisville Prolongs Minor Series

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Oct. 7.—Tex Hughson, whose three triumphs over Kansas City put the Louisville Colonels in the Little World Series, defeated Newark for the second time here tonight to prevent the Bears, who lead 3-2, from clinching the series. The score was 6 to 2 with Hughson, a slim right-hander, keeping nine Newark hits well scattered and striking out eight batters.

The Bears bunched four of their blows in the first inning which saw Tommy Holmes open with a double but only one run came in when Second Baseman Vince Sherlock made a sensational stop of Bud Metheney's hit over second and threw out Ed Levy at third. The other Bear tally was Alex Kampouris' fourth homer with the bases empty for a new series record in the third.

Sixth-Game Series Play by Play

to Goodman in deep right, Bartell going to third after the catch. On the first pitch Gehringer raised a pop foul which Wilson caught half way to third base.

REDS—With two strikes against him, Goodman lifted a high fly to McCosky, who took it without moving out of his tracks. On the first pitch, F. McCormick raised a high foul to Higgins behind third base. Ripple walked on four straight balls. Wilson hit a low liner to Campbell who took it and fell on the soft grass but hung onto the ball.

FOURTH INNING

TIGERS—Greenberg looked at two balls and a strike, and then raised a high foul to Wilson a few feet from the batter's box. York slammed a three-and-one pitch into short left for a single. With the count one and one, Campbell shot a hot grounder at Joost who threw to Myers to start a double play, Joost to Myers to F. McCormick.

REDS—Joost knocked a grounder to Bartell in deep short and was thrown out on a close play. With the count two and two, Myers bounced the ball back at Gorsica, who deflected it to Bartell, who threw the runner out at first. Walters was called out on strikes.

FIFTH INNING

TIGERS—Joost went to his right and picked up Higgins' fast roller in time to make the throw to first. Tebbetts knocked the first pitch back at Myers and was thrown out easily. Gorsica was given a round of applause as he came to bat. He was called out on three strikes.

REDS—Werber worked the count to three and two, and then grounded out, Bartell to York. With the count two strikes and one ball, M. McCormick knocked a high fly into leftfield which Greenberg caught on the slope that rises to the fence. Goodman dropped a single into short leftfield. On the first pitch, F. McCormick sent an easy grounder to Higgins who threw to Gehringer forcing Goodman at second.

SIXTH INNING

TIGERS—Bartell hit the first pitch for a ground single into leftfield. Werber made a spectacular stop of McCosky's hot grounder and threw to Joost, forcing Bartell at second, but Joost's throw to first was too late to complete a double play. With the count one strike and two balls, Gehringer knocked a sharp grounder to F. McCormick, who pivoted and threw to Myers and then got back to the bag to take the shortstop's throw for a double play.

REDS—Ripple fouled off the first pitch and then poked a single past second. When York came rushing in to protect against a bunt, Wilson boosted a single just over his head and Ripple went all the way to third before Campbell could come in and get the ball to make a play. Joost walked on five pitches to fill the bases. Fred Hutchinson, a right-hander, started warming up in Detroit's bull pen. On the first pitch, Myers bounced high to Gorsica who tossed the ball to Tebbetts to force Ripple at the plate, leaving the bases loaded. After working the count to three and two, Walters topped the ball toward third base and Wilson beat Higgins' throw to Tebbetts to score. The play was scored as a fielder's choice with no assist and no error. The bases were still loaded. Werber bounced to Gorsica who threw to Tebbetts who stepped on the plate and then relayed the ball to York at first for a double play.

SEVENTH INNING

Tigers—Greenberg tapped to the box and was thrown out by Walters. York singled into left field. Joost ran over almost behind first base to spear Campbell's grounder and throw him out on a close play, York moving to second. Higgins worked the count to one strike and two balls, and then grounded out, Myers to F. McCormick.

Reds—M. McCormick drove a vicious single right between Gorsica's legs and out into center field. Goodman tried twice and the second time laid down a successful sacrifice, Gorsica to York. F. McCormick sent a hot grounder to Bartell, who waved M. McCormick back to second and then threw to first for the out. Ripple was intentionally walked. Wilson walked on four straight balls, filling the bases. Joost sent an easy grounder to Gehringer and was thrown out.

EIGHTH INNING

TIGERS—Weber came in fast almost to the pitcher's box to take Tebbetts' grounder and throw him out. Earl Averill batted for Gorsica. Averill sent a grounder to F. McCormick back of first and the first baseman tried to beat the runner to the bag, ending in what appeared to be a dead heat and then colliding with Umpire Ballanfant outside the base line and dropping the ball as both men fell to the ground. The umpire ruled Averill safe and there was a long argument, followed by a conference between Ballanfant and Ormsby which ended with the runner still on the bag. Manager McKechnie continued the argument with Ormsby for several minutes and the crowd booed when Ormsby finally motioned McKechnie away. McCormick was charged with an error. Sullivan batted for Bartell and flied to M. McCormick, Averill holding first. With the count one strike and two balls, McCosky raised a high fly to M. McCormick REDS—Hutchinson went in to pitch and Frank Croucher went to shortstop for the Tigers. Myers struck out. Walters hit the first pitch for a beautiful arching home run over the left field wall, 330 feet from home plate. Werber hit a high fly to Campbell in right field. M. McCormick fouled off three balls and worked the count to three and two before walking. With the count one and one, Goodman lifted a high fly to Greenberg in left field.

NINTH INNING

TIGERS—The official attendance was announced as 30,481. With the count two strikes and one ball, Gehringer hit a grounder to Myers, who threw wild to first, letting the runner go all the way to second. Greenberg walked on five pitches. Werber went almost to the foul line to take York's grounder and throw to Joost at second to start a double play, Gehringer going to third. Campbell flied to M. McCormick in deep center.

Tigers, save Walters who did the job today. Derringer's last performance was a five-hit victory for the Reds in the fourth game.

In the decisive battle between Newsom's fast ball and the wide reportoire of the canny Derringer, baseball betting men are declining to quote odds against either team. Frankly they admit it is an even-money bet. Thus, with pitching ace meeting pitching ace and the series result in the balance, the seventh game is already sold out with frenzied Cincinnati fans having exhausted all tickets tonight save the bleacher seats where lines began to form during today's battle.

Walters Stifles Tigers

Today Walters surpassed even his three-hit job on the Tigers in the series second game. His fast ball was in excellent order, and he permitted only two Tigers to reach second base, one arriving there on an infield error. There was no dynamite in the Detroit bats today. Walters plucked the fuse. The only extra-base hit he yielded was Dick Bartell's double. Hank Greenberg he held hitless. The left field fence, only 328 feet from the plate, was a mirage to the Tigers with Walters on the mound.

The 30,481 last-ditch fans in the stands had their ecstatic moment in the eighth inning, and Walters provided that one. He created hysteria in the stands by pounding Freddy Hutchinson's first pitch over the left-field wall, himself, personally, to boost his own lead to 4-0 at that point. The next two batters took their turns at the plate amid a fearful din that Walters' homer was still evoking.

It was Schoolboy Rowe out there for the Tigers today and on Rowe the Reds heaped more World Series disaster. The 6-foot-4-inch right-hander, who had been batted out of the box in the second game, failed to last out the first inning today. The Reds unloosed a four-hit assault that fetched two runs across the plate and drove Rowe from the box. The only out Rowe had been able to negotiate was a Cincinnati sacrifice.

By all odds, today's was the most tense of all of the games of this series, fraught as it was with disaster for the Reds if they lost. The Tigers' home run power was an ever-present threat with the slugging of Greenberg and York in previous games still fresh with Cincinnati fandom.

The eighth inning produced the series' greatest uproar. With Walters struggling to protect his 3-to-0 lead against the threat of Tiger power, First Baseman Frank McCormick, of the Reds, collided heavily with Umpire Lee Ballanfant after fielding a grounder off Pinch-hitter Earl Averill's bat, and dropped the ball.

When the umpire called Averill safe, the Reds stormed at him. They pointed out that McCormick had beaten Averill to the bag easily and had held the ball until his collision with the umpire 6 feet beyond the base. The entire Cincinnati team charged Bellanfant. Judge Landis sat severely in his box on the rail to await developments. Bellenfant finally agreed to consult Umpire in Chief Ormsby at the plate. They met halfway down the base line and Ormsby immediately upheld his colleague, ordering play to continue.

Boos Rock Field

Boos rocked the field, but Walters went back to work and disposed of the Detroit threat by forcing Pinch-hitter Billy Sullivan and Barney McCoskey to fly out harmlessly to center field.

The Reds didn't dally with the Detroit pitching. On the second pitch, lead-off man Bill Werber launched the Reds' ten-hit attack with a double against the left field wall, only 2 feet short of a home run. Hank Greenberg had no chance for a catch. Mike McCormick sacrificed Werber to third.

Then Rowe invited trouble for himself. Ival Goodman bounced a grounder to Rudy York who had no chance for a play at the plate, but Rowe stood as if transfixed in the middle of the diamond, failing to cover first. When he did race to the bag, he was too late, and Goodman beat out the hit for a single as Werber scored the first run of the game.

Goodman's was the first of three consecutive hits and the four the Reds packed into the inning. Frank McCormick rammed a single against the left field bleacher seats and Jimmy Ripple scored Goodman with a single to right. At a signal from Manager Baker, Rowe left the box, again a failure in the series, and young Johnny Gorsica got the pitching job.

Gorsica did a valiant job of it in an attempt to keep the Tigers in the ball game. With men on first and third and only one out in that first inning, he halted the damage at two runs by striking out Wilson and causing Joost to hit into a force play which began with a spectacular stop by Higgins.

Until he was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth, Gorsica allowed only one run in 6 2-3 innings, but it was a futile effort what with Walters pitching the way he was.

The Reds threw up magnificent defense behind Walters despite the two errors with which they were charged. Three times they nipped Tiger rallies with clever double plays and Bill Werber contributed a pair of story-book stops at third.

Tigers' Turn Again Today, Says Baker

the grade. If we shouldn't we'll come off that field with our chins up, knowing we battled them until the last man was out and that we didn't let the American League down. But we're not thinking of losing.

I've been told that Bill McKechnie is to come back with Paul Derringer. Well, as Buck Newsom says, it doesn't make any difference who the pitcher is—he's got to throw three strikes past those sluggers of ours.

In reviewing today's game, I want to add my small voice to the chorus praising Bucky Walters for a great pitching job. And in that connection, I'd like to do a little second guessing. As I watched Bucky work from the third base coaching box, the thought which kept coming back to me during the game was that he didn't have the stuff he showed against us in the second game here. As a result of that feeling, I kept thinking we'd start pounding him."

As each inning came and went and we kept going down without getting a run across, however, I began to wonder if my eyes were playing tricks on me. The answer is either that I couldn't see all of Bucky's stuff or that he really didn't have as much of it and had to rely more on courage. And whichever is the correct one, it doesn't detract one bit from his fine performance.

We hit several balls very hard, to be sure. But nearly all of them wound up in the hands of Red fielders. Take Bruce Campbell's hit in the fourth inning, for example. I would have banked on that one. But Eddie Joost came up with it in sensational fashion and turned what looked like a base hit into a double play.

Some of the Tigers felt that the soggy infield slowed up their hits to make some of that spectacular Cincinnati fielding possible. But I prefer to give the credit to the fine plays of the Red infielders and incidentally to remind my boys that the infield was just as soggy when the National Leaguers took their turns at the plate.

Joost looked especially good out there today. It is hard to imagine how Lonnie Frey, the injured regular second baseman for the Reds, could have done any better.

the evening. Bob Feller was to have gone down there with me. And I guess at the time I was telling what a fine boy he was and apologizing for his failure to show up, he was among those present on the firing squad at what was supposed to be my execution.

"Only two or three did the talking. The others who appeared before Bradley were only onlookers. I believe the boys are sorry for what they did. After the final game of the season every last one of them shook my hand, wished me a pleasant winter, and with one or two exceptions, said they hoped I'd be back with them as manager next spring.

"As for me making a 'nervous wreck' out of Feller, that is a laugh. A father couldn't have given a son more consideration than I showed Bob at all times. In spite of pressure I refused to work him out of turn. I even picked spots where I could give him a four or five day rest on occasions. He won 27 games. That's a pretty healthy showing. He's a great boy. I wish I had a dozen like him. He's an honest lad and you've got to admire that kind.

"I did criticize some of my players, but it was not any more violent or personal than that dished out by other managers. We were in the thick of the pennant fight and I merely tried to keep their heads up.

"A different situation would have prevailed and I say this in all frankness, had I been given the backing that any manager is entitled to expect. On one occasion a player I had suspended for a flagrant violation showed up in uniform the next day. I told him he was through, temporarily. He replied: 'No, I'm not. I fixed it up with the front office. They told me to come back and apologize to you and everything would be all right.'

"Things got so bad that finally some of the players would not obey my signals."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Renewal of small-lot purchasing by mills and dealers refinancing lines on which profits were taken last week lifted wheat prices about a cent today, but the gains were wiped out in a final-hour setback.

At highs of 83½ and 82¾ for December and May contracts prices were within fractions of last week's best figures, which stand as the market's peak for the last four months. This buying, which apparently was prompted by the decreasing movement of wheat to terminals and further tightening of the commercial supply situation, diminished in the last hour and when profit taking was resumed wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with Saturday: December, 82¾@82½; May, 81⅞@81½.

Corn closed ⅛@⅛ lower: December, 58¼; May, 59½; oats, unchanged to ¼ down; soybeans, ⅜ off to ¼ up; rye, ¼@½ down, and lard unchanged to 2 lower.

Corn fluctuated with wheat, but over a more narrow range, with some of the weakness reflecting country bookings of 127,000 bushels and receipts of 342 cars, although most of the arrivals went direct to industrial users or were Government owned. Harvesting is becoming more widespread, although rains have slowed up progress in some localities. No. 1 yellow corn sold up to 63¾, or 3¾ over the loan rate, and No. 1 white was priced at 75. But these quotations have attracted only moderate quantities of old corn.

Steel Production Rise to Continue In Current Week

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Steel mills will increase production to 94.2 per cent of capacity this week, only fractionally below the highest rate at which the industry has ever operated, the American Iron & Steel Institute said today.

This represented an advance of 1.6 points from 92.6 per cent in the preceding week. A month ago output was at 91.9 per cent and a year ago 88.6 per cent.

Highest rate attained since the Steel Institute started compiling figures in 1933 was reached in November last year, when production was geared at 94.4 per cent of capacity.

Steel men recalled that although mills in 1929 used virtually 100 per cent of production facilities the present rate meant more actual steel was being made because of the new producing facilities added since then.

The Market

Stocks Unable to Break Resistance Level Balking Them for 2 Weeks

New York, Oct. 7.—The stock market wroved unable again today to push on through those resistance levels where it has been balked for more than two weeks now. Indeed, for more than a month now the market has been thrashing around without being able to rise at any time more than a point above its best level of the first week of September.

The best face that could be put on the stock market's performance today was that activity fell to a low estate when prices could not make headway on the upside. The day's grist of business footed up to only 392,000 shares. So far as movement was concerned, the stock average lost 0.16 point on the day and the extremes of the fluctuations were only 1-3 a point apart. No section of the list was able to give a good account of itself, but perhaps the rail shares were a little more vulnerable than the rest.

A better example of the seeming perversity of prices would be hard to find than the behavior of the steel stocks in the face of the news that steel operations this week would be at 94.2 per cent of ingot capacity, or within 2-10 of 1 point of the high record of the week of last November 27. It is altogether likely that the tonnage of steel produced in this country this week will be the largest in history. Yet the steel shares were the weakest group among the industrial stocks.

United States Steel, the most active stock on the board, closed ⅝ point lower at 59¼ after having sold up to 60⅜. The high for this stock since the European War broke out was 82¾ on September 12 of last year.

The wheat and cotton markets were as featureless as that for stocks. Wheat displayed some early strength, but profit taking near the close of trading left prices unchanged to ¾ cents lower. Cotton closed 1 point off to 4 points higher.

In extremely limited volume Treasury bonds today exhibited a firm tone while foreign issues were mixed and domestic corporate loans had a somewhat easier tone along with the decline in stocks. Turnover on the Stock Exchange at $5,498,000 was somewhat under the preceding full session.

Final prices for Treasurys on the exchange showed gains up to 10/32 point and the over counter prices were unchanged to 5/32 point higher.

Among foreign obligations numerous German bonds showed marked strength, a few rising to the best levels of the year with gains up to around 2 points. Japanese issues on the other hand moved generally lower in fair volume of dealings, one decline of more than 7 points appearing. Australian and Canadian bonds moved narrowly and without uniform trend.

The average of 30 domestic corporate issues was off 0.05 point on the day, rail issues accounting for most of the decline. Industrial and public utility liens were steady.

The advance of some of the rails, in special instances reaching new high ground for the year at the best prices of the day, included certain of the more speculative groups as well as the higher priced bonds. Among those to sell at the best prices of the year were some issues of Baltimore & Ohio and Lehigh Valley as well as of Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern and Union Pacific.

Cotton Futures

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Hedge sales checked a forward move in cotton futures today. Final prices were 1 point lower to 3 higher.

Speculative continents remained inactive pending issue tomorrow (Tuesday) of the Government cotton crop report. Interest in the report ran high because of the wide variations in recent private estimates on crop size.

Trade and mill interests were buyers. Hedging increased when forward tendencies became pronounced.

Listen! with Glynn

If any of you people have been lying awake nights, worrying about how your horse would weather an airplane trip, it's possible that you'll be able to set your mind at rest, or vice versa, today.

Because arriving in town by airplane are Gene Autry, the cowboy singing star, and his horse, Champ, on their way to the Madison Square Garden Rodeo in New York. WJSV's indefatigable staff of engineers, special events men and announcers are to be on hand at the airport to record the opinions of Pardner Autry and, if possible, of Champ himself on just how a self-respecting horse reacts to such newfangled modes of transportation.

The specially equipped plane arrives at the airport at 1:35 p. m. and will remain in Washington only a half hour. But in that period WJSV will do its bit for posterity by making a record of the event and playing it back for listeners at 3:35 p. m. Incidentally, it's supposed to be the first time that a horse has ever made a cross-country flight in a regularly licensed transport plane.

The plane left Burbank Field in Los Angeles Sunday afternoon following Autry's C. B. S. program and, after leaving Wasington, is scheduled to arrive at LaGuardia Field in New York at 5 this evening, having made ten stops en route. Champ should be pretty used to flying by the time he arrives in Washington, so if you're interested in such an epochal event as how a horse responds to air travel, be sure to listen.
